Sort, summarize, chat with documents or websites

In terms of size, there is no industry standard: Measure varies. Some websites measure in tokens, some in words, some in characters, and some in size of document (IntelliPPT: free up to 1MB upload to be summarized. $5/month up to 5MB).

Size for retail products: Retail, mass-market tools are mostly free vs. subscription. The tool we are building is institutional. So it's apples and oranges in that way. We can determine what works for Moody's. If you ask users, they will say "as big documents as possible".

List of products:

1. ChatDoc.com - Chat with documents. Get instant answers. Features: Expand, collapse side drawers. Day and Night modes. Individual files vs file "Collections". Chat with a website. Custom prompts. Documents and URLs are both calld "Docs" and can both be part of a Collection. Select text you want to chat with. ChatDoc User Guide is also interesting. Incorporating arXiv. Note to self: I have documents uploaded to the free version. I used to have a subscription.

3. WordTune AI: Chrome extension. Summarize documents and identify key points with AI. PDF summarizer. Summarizes by page. WordTune summarizes all pages where the content is "summarizable". Meaning, if there are 3 pages of infographics, WordTune will skip them. It can only summarize text. Page numbers in the summary, correspond with the page number in the PDF. If you highlight the summary paragraph, WordTune will take you to the page in the document, where that content came from. Some additional features: add to notes, re-summarize, copy.

Note to self: I installed on personal desktop computer, and it works great. https://www.wordtune.com/
