5e dragonborn draconic sorcerer

2016-03-04, 05:31 PM (ISO 8601) Is there a problem considering two different colors in a character? If you have a bronze choice for your race, should you choose bronze for your class as well? 2016-03-04, 05:36 PM (ISO 8601) 2016-03-04, 05:43 PM (ISO 8601) Technically no, and from a min/max perspective you want to so you have resistance to two different energy types. That said, I rule that you can't unless that dual lineage is an important part of your personality. I further allow Dragon Dragon Dragon Wizards to turn their resistance to safety with SorcPoint. Dragonborn should be better dragon wizards than any other IMO race but it's not as they stands. 2016-03-04, 05:52 PM (ISO 8601) As the other two have said, there is no RAW that says you, as a Dragonborn, should be the same father and ancestors as the one you already have. I say try to avoid mixing chromati and metal heritage, since they lie on opposite sides of the scale (no pun here.) don't say it won't be interesting, and you definitely don't have real dragons for parents, but I imagine some dracone nature has been moved. 2016-03-04, 06:44 PM (ISO 8601) Your father was a blue-born dragon and your mother was a red one! Your mother's genes were stronger so you are also a red-born dragon but you have some blue dragon power hidden in you (witch). You can replace dragons born by real dragons or half dragons. You can choose if your mother or father gets the upper hand and the witch of the dragon heritage is actually the upper hand. ZenBear, doesn't the rules say that if something gives you resistance while you're already resisting, will it become immunity? =) Last edited by Addaran; 2016-03-04 at 06:45 PM. 2016-03-04, 06:50 PM (ISO 8601) As PHB says, the first dragonborn has ever created a scale of vibrant colors matching the colors of their dragon keen, but generations of cross-breeding have created a more uniform appearance. So a dragon born with a multicolored Dracone generation is not only possible but also the norm. It may still be strange that a magical influence decided to weapon your ego and another will spell you out. Maybe the one who couldn't catch the weapon found this crazy way 2016-03-04, 07:07 PM (ISO 8601) originally sent by Addaran your father was a blue-born dragon and your mother was the red one! It seems I'm crazy =(that sucks, I liked the idea of dragonborn/tiefling becoming immune if they had the right class/spell feature. 2016-03-04, 07:53 PM (ISO 8601) no problem with it at all as the dragonborn race is right and forced to stick to diddling your color. I imagine most of them are Muggerle 2016-03-04, 10:58 PM (ISO 8601) I like the idea of letting dragonborn witches treat their breath weapons as spells for elemental proximity purposes (and perhaps Metamagic? You want to test that, so a dragon witch get better resistance, but your weapon does extra damage. : You pulled DracoXHarry!
