Lacquer Oak Board

Oak lacquer furniture is made of medium-density and sturdy hardwood, with moderate bending and compressive strength and poor toughness. It has good thermoforming ability, making it durable for furniture.

Oak lacquer furniture has strong resistance to decay in heartwood, making it one of the most durable woods even in corrosive environments.

It is easy to process with both manual and mechanical tools, suitable for nailing, screw drilling, and bonding. It can retain paint and staining for a long time and can be polished to achieve a special final effect. Oak lacquer furniture has a low moisture content and is less affected by wood shrinkage and swelling, making it less prone to cracking or deformation. It has strong thermoforming ability, durability, and resistance to decay in heartwood.

Multilayer board

Plywood with a natural wood texture is used as the base material, with clear wood grain that can rival natural wood.

The product surface has no color difference, and it is fire-retardant, washable, wear-resistant, moisture-proof, anti-corrosive, acid-resistant, alkali-resistant, dust-repellent, and does not produce mold or blackening due to damp walls.

The board does not require paint, avoiding the production of unhealthy odors and carcinogenic substances from paint, making it a new generation of green, non-toxic, odorless, and pollution-free material. It is made by using multi-layer plywood arranged in a cross pattern as the base material, with high-quality solid wood or engineered wood as the surface material. It is produced through several processes such as cold pressing, hot pressing, sanding, and curing.

It has the characteristics of good structural stability and is not easily deformed. Due to its cross-lamination, high-temperature and high-pressure production process, it solves the deformation defect of solid wood boards from an internal stress perspective. It is a good material for bathroom cabinets in the industry.
