The storyline of Legends of zelda: A Reference to the Past is a little more complicated than most of the titles of The Legend of zelda. Before even stepping foot in Hyrule and going on a quest, there's quite a backstory that was originally found in the game guide for the Super Nintendo version. Instruction Guide To create a scene for this adventure of the legendary hero Hyrule, it will be informative to delve into the myth of Triforce, an ancient epic about the creation of a world that still believe in the land of Hyrule. Each culture has such myths and theories about the creation of their worlds, and it can be useful and interesting to study them in detail because they often affect modern social structures. Legends say that the mythical gods of Hyrule were like their chosen people of Hyllia. These ancient people have left the scrolls that are the main source of legends ... Creating Hyrule Creation Hyrule from a reference to the game's past guide. According to the Hylian Scrolls, the mythical gods descended from heaven into the world and created order and life. The God of the Force painted the mountains red with fire and created the earth. The God of Wisdom created science and witchcraft and inspired order in nature. And the God of Courage, through justice and strength, has created life - animals that crawl on the ground and birds that hover in the sky. After the gods finished their work, they left the world, but not before creating a symbol of their strength, the golden triangle known as Trifors. A small but powerful part of the essence of the gods was carried out in this mighty artifact that was to lead a smart life in the world of Hyrule. Although it was an inanimate object, Trifors had the right to bestow the three titles that gave the man who received their great powers: the Power Forger, the Keeper of Knowledge and the Jury of Courage. From his hideout in the so-called Golden Earth, where the gods placed him, Trifors beckoned people from the outside world to seek him out in the hope that someone worthy of these titles would find him. With their magic imbued with blood, the people of Gilian were endowed with psychic abilities and skill in witchcraft. It was also said that their long, pointed ears allowed them to special messages from the gods, so they were highly regarded by many people in Hyrule. Their descendants settled in different parts of the world and passed on their knowledge and magical knowledge to all people. But with his death, knowledge was often distorted or lost at all... The Gateway to the Golden Gate of The Earth on the Golden Earth from References to past Instruction Manual. In Hyrule, there are many hylian buildings that are mentioned repeatedly in legends. These buildings, which now lie in ruins, the pale shadows of their former splendor, are closely related to Trifors. Some have even said that the house Triforce ... If it were just a symbol of the gods, Trifors would be desired by many. But a verse from the Book of Mudora (a collection of hylian legends and knowledge) made Triforce even more desirable: In the realm out of sight, the sky shines gold rather than blue. There, the power of Trifors makes mortal dreams a reality. Many aggressively searched for a desire-giving trifor, but no one, not even the sages of Ileyan, was sure of his whereabouts; knowledge has been lost over time. Some said That Trifors was lying under the desert, others said it was in a cemetery in the shadow of the Mountain of Death, but no one ever found it. This desire for Triforce soon turned into a hold of power, which in turn led to bloodshed. Soon the only motive left among those who sought Trifors was pure greed. Once, quite by chance, the gates to the Golden Land of Trifors opened a gang of thieves, skillful in black art. This land was like no other. At dusk gathering, Triforce shone from its resting place high above the world. In a long battle, the leader of the thieves fought his way past his followers in a manoe market to the Golden Power. After plunging his followers, the chief triumphed over Trifors and grabbed him with bloodied hands. He heard a whispering voice: If you have a strong desire or dream, wish it... And in response, the roar of the brigandist leader echoed in time and space even reached the distant land of Hiruule. The name of this king of thieves is Ganondorf Dragmire, but he is known by his pseudonym, Mandrag Ganon, which means Ganon of enchanted thieves. Prison War Home article: Jailing war in prison war from references to past game guides. I don't know what Ganon wanted from Trifors. However, over time, evil power begins to flow from the Golden Earth and greedy people were brought there to become members of Ganon's army. Black clouds constantly darkened the sky, and many disasters surround Hyrule. Lord Girule sent for the Seven Sages and Knights Girule and ordered them to seal the entrance to the Golden Earth. Trifors, being an inanimate object, cannot judge between good and evil. So she couldn't have known that desires were evil; He simply provided them. This mighty weapon has become known as the Blade of the Evil Scourge, or Master Sword. He was so powerful that only one who was pure with the heart and the power of the body could possess it. The sages and knights of Girule joined forces to wage war on this evil horde. The Knights took the brunt of the fierce attack, and although they bravely fought many brave souls were lost that day. However, their lives were not lost in vain, for they bought precious time for the Seven Wise Men to magically seal Ganon on the Golden Land. All Hirule rejoiced in the victory that supported peace and order over the evil and chaos of Ganon. This war, which claimed many lives, became known as the War in Prison in stories told in later centuries. The Wizard's Arrival of the Wizard from a reference to the past Guide to Instruction. Many centuries have passed since the war in prison. The land of Girul has healed its wounds, and people have lived in peace for a long time. Memories of a brutal prison war have disappeared from generation to generation... It is not surprising, therefore, that no one was prepared for the new disasters that had recently struck Khairul. The sea and drought, uncontrollable even by magic, devastated the earth. King Hirulier, after a council with his sages, ordered a study of the prisoner of the Dark World (as the Golden Land became known), but the seal of the wise men appeared to remain intact. He offered rewards to those who could find the source of these troubles. In response to these calls came a stranger named Agahnym and suppressed the calamity of the previously invisible form of magic. As a reward, the king gave him a new position of chief counselor and heir to the Seven Wise Men. The masses proclaimed him their hero. The world is back in Hirula... Or was it?
