Nathan Windle reviewed the Avalanche Lake Mount Marcy Loop Trail This cycle was awesome. We did this as our first mountaineering trip and the first time climbing Marcy. We made it CCW. Coming from the south side is a very different personality of the mountain than on the other side. Above the forest line it was super windy and cool, but a lot of fun, and very well marked by rocks. I highly recommend this cycle! It took us longer than we expected, the first day taxed, crossing the avalanche lake and then getting cold. We camped on a thin hill which was nice and glad we got some height up until the end of our first day. We got up and went out for a second day after about 9 hours with some stops and slowly. Incredible hike, totally worth it! Not easy, but not scary, especially if you go slow. Probably going to get a lot colder in the next few weeks, we were glad we did it in early October, probably it would have been a more unpleasant night at the end of the season for us. I went on Monday afternoon. was a little over my limit on up, but I did it. The views that I loved from both mountains. Cascade Cascade The best top to watch for sure. I hit a little rain, but not bad. I loved them both though. It was very cold on top of the cascade. With my late start it wasn't busy in my direction. We recommend this one for sure!!! Joseph Diamond viewed the Giant Mountain Peak through the TrailCompleted Ridge today. Steep and rocky. Magnificent views from above. The first time I used the walking staff and this makes hiking a lot easier. My watch said it was 4 miles one way, it's definitely more than the map here suggests. That's a great trail! The conditions of the trail were fair today. There were some dirty soft spots along the trail, but I would still call the trail passable. I did it on the tops of Porter and Cascade on this hike, and there's a huge difference of opinion. The view from cascade is excellent! Porter dim by comparison. These two peaks are also part of the 46 high peaks in Adirondacks. Perhaps there is an aspiring 46er in the making after today's hike. Time will tell. Only 44 more to go! Enjoy the trail! Robert Pist reviewed haystack, pool, Saddleback TrailIt one took me a while, but what a great hike. Picking up the Haystack was great, the pool was a bit of a challenge and the Saddleback cliffs were really interesting, the best part of the hike. It's also a very windy day. Mike Murray considered the Giant Mountain Peak through the Trailtrail Ridge was steep from the start. We caught the mico system at the top and had no views. Bummer! Arrived at the parking lot at 7.15am this morning (Monday) and many places were still available. The trail is rocky and moderately steep all the way up, though not super hard sections. The cascade was pretty dirty, while the porter was a wet mess. The views from the cascade are phenomenal (albeit windy), and the views from the porter are excellent as well (and much less windy!). Mike Rosen reviewed Mount Marcy's Avalanche Loop TrailHey, don't tell anyone, but it's the best two-day loop in the state. Slack pack it Algonquin to get your feet nice and whipped. Swimming holes abound. We faced bad weather on the way from the cold to, but we still made a decent time. The 3 h 48 mCascade Mountain Trail is a popular walking route to access Porter Mountain and Cascade Mountain Peaks. The trail is exposed and steep with a light rock clambering along the way. Tourists are treated to amazing views and waterfalls on their way up. The summit can be crowded in the summer months. The trail is a popular destination for Lake Placid tourists and ski enthusiasts. Check the weather before you go as cold conditions and sudden weather changes are frequent. The trail can be From Route 73 to reaching Cascade Lakes.Show More 2 - Mount Marcy via Van Hoevenberg Hoevenberg Wildernesshard Peaks (902)Length: 15.4 miles and Est. 8 11m Mount Marcy Peak is the highest point in New York State in the High Peaks region. It's a difficult hike because of its length. From the Van Khovenberg Trail from Lodirondack Loy or near Lake Heart, the trail is simple until you reach the Marcy Dam. Once you have reached the dam, you start climbing up the rocky terrain, since the trail is mostly boulders, and it persists most of the way from there. Stop and rest Phelps Brook and Indian Falls to take in some lovely views. You want to refill the water bottles here as there are no streams the rest of the way. Hiking gets harder as you get closer to the top. The last 1.2 miles is a tough climb hike and the last push is a foundation that feels cooler than it is. However, the gain from Mount Marcy Summit is a fantastic view of Adirondack High Peaks, Mont Royale in Montreal, Canada, and the Green Mountains in Vermont all with the highest peaks in the state. This popular route within the mountains of Adirondack is heavily traveled, in well maintained, and very well marked, however it can be rough on weak ankles. Hiking boots with good ankle support are recommended. Show more - Ampersand Mountain TrailHigh Peaks Wildernesshard (970)Length: 4.8 miles and Est. 3 h 7 m This hike is not one of 46,but at 3352'. Ampersand is a fun and challenging hike with great views from above. There are some steep, hard areas with rocky faces and some bouldering, but it's worth it. Depending on the time of year, we recommend microspikes/crampons. Show More 4 - Mount Joe Loop TrailHigh Peaks Wildernessmoderate (861)Length: 1.8 Miles and Est. 1 h-12m Mount Jo stands 700 feet above Lake Heart near ADK Loy south of Lake Placid in the heart of the high Peaks zone Adirondacks. Mount Joe has two trails that lead to its top. The summit offers spectacular views of the High Peaks and McIntyre range and a great hike for children. This is a very short two mile loop hike that will take you to the top of a wonderful little peak over The Heart Lake with just over 600 feet of climbing. This is a great hike for young children or an older family member that you would like to get outdoors. It's also a good hike if you have the time and energy after another shorter 46er hike like Phelps or maybe Tabletop.Show over 5 - Big Mountain Slide Through BrothersHigh Peaks Wildernesshard (711)Length: 7.6 miles and Est. 5 hours 11 hours fantastic hike with great views of High Peaks, increased height, rock scramble, and a well-marked trail. The brothers' path is a rocky ridge for the first 1.5 miles. Then climb the Big Slide Peak. Local favorite and staple in the High Peaks area. Parking will certainly fill up on weekends, and tourists will have to 3 miles down the road and pay for transfers. Well worth the cost (start early early get a parking space!!). Show more No 6 - Algonquin, Irokeis and Wright Peaks via Algonquin TrailHigh Peaks Wildernesshard (695)Length: 10.2 miles and Est. 6 h 6 mGreat views from all three peaks. From Wright and Algonquin you have a great view of Lake Placid. You can even see the Olympic ski jump from the ski. From Algonquin and Iroquois you will have a good view of the high peaks both to the east and west. The first mile and a half is relatively flat with rare rocks. After that, you will start to gain altitude quickly. At this point, the density of rocks and the size of the rocks will increase. Wright's peak is a fun stop. There are many bare face cliffs on the hike up. After that, you will continue towards Algonquin. From now on you will walk on mostly bare cliffs. On a dry day it will probably be straight ahead. In wet and dirty conditions be prepared to spend more energy climbing rock face and find little leg holds to prevent sliding. From Algonquin, the trip to the Iroquois is fun and simple. Follow the cairns down the south side of Algonquin and you will eventually find a supported trail. at some point you will come to a sharp left turn and a sign that says the footprint of the foot is on the left. To get to the Iroquois you want to ignore this sign and look for a herd path to the right of the sign. This will lead you to the Iroquois. If you start to lose altitude quickly, you miss the heard way. Show More 7 - Marcy Dame TrailHigh Peaks Wildernessmoderate (1084)Length: 4.2 miles and Est. 1 h 58 mThis trail is rocky and full up and down. Great views at the end and opportunities to link with other trails to use different routes on the way to or from. This trail mainly consists of an access road to the Marcy Dam. It may be a good summer hike, but it's best for skiing and snow shoes. The trail is full up and down, so it can be a lot of fun for intermediate and experienced skiers, but it can be a real handful for beginners because there will be a lot of falls going down the lush slopes. Show More 8 - Ridge Trail to Giant Mountain and Rocky Peak Ridge High Peaks Wildernesshard (565)Length: 8.9 miles and Est. 5 h 36 mAlthough dogs can use this trail, users have reported that they may have problems with scrambling. Show more than 9 - Algonquin Peak and Wright Peak via Algonquin TrailHigh Peaks Wildernesshard (483)Length: 10 miles and Est. 5 h 22 mAlthough a little tense, the McIntyre range is one of the most beautiful climbs in all high peaks. There are several ways to climb these peaks, and whichever way you decide, you'll have great views all day, the weather allows. Start at Adirondack Cottage in Heart Lake. After checking in at the trailhead at the far end of the parking lot, follow the 1 mile path. You will see the crossroads marked, follow to the right, because it's your way to the peak of Wright, Algonquin, the peak of the Iroquois. It is 2.6 km to the top For the first part to Wright, the cliffs make a ladder that is pretty nice and easy to follow. You will come across some steep cliffs, but they are easy to stand up to. You can't miss the Sign Ofa Peak (#16 46'er list), follow the trail left .4 miles to the top. On clear days you can see many kilometers in each direction. There is a plaque dedicated to the servicemen who crashed into the mountain so look around it. Once you climb back down, keep heading up the trail for about 30-40 minutes and you'll be on top of Algonquin (#2 on the 46'er list). Very beautiful views. If you follow to the top you will see cairns lining down the back of Algonquin leading to the peak of the Iroquois, which is 1 mile. Now, after following cairns down you will see an arrow pointing to the left, do not take it. Go to the right. From here the path is very narrow. At some point, the cliffs get steep and you have to climb a part of it. Shorter people and children will have difficulties here. But once you do it during the first peak, the mohawk is next. Just keep walking along the trail and the kiirs and you'll do it. Once again more beautiful views. On the way back, you can follow that arrow and take it to the avalanche lake, and follow the signs to Marcy Dam and Lodge or just back track as you come.
