Composition by Frederick Chopin Prelude Op. 28, No. 4 in E minor Porticodoro / SmartCGArt Media Productions - Steinway Piano Challenges to Play This File? See the media report. Prelude Op. 28, No. 4 by Frederick Chopin is one of Chopin's 24 preludes. At Chopin's request, the play was played at his own funeral, along with Mozart's Requiem. Hans von Builov's name was called a prelude to suffocation because of a sense of desperation. In fact, Chopin's last dynamic marking in the play is smorzando, which means to die. But the prelude may have once been called. According to George's daughter Sanda Solange, who stayed with the composer at a monastery in Mallorca when the preludes were written: My mother gave the title to each of Chopin's wonderful preludes; these titles were saved on the score he gave us. This title score is lost. But Solange made a record of the names of the preludes, apparently without naming the foreplay number. It is believed that the name Keles larmes au liked du clo'tre humide? (What tears are shed from the depths of the damp monastery?) corresponds to the prelude No. 4. The cultural heritage of the movie and television Jack Nicholson character plays the prelude in full in the 1970 film Five Easy Pieces. Antonio Carlos Jobim's song Insensatez is based on foreplay. This part is shown in an episode of Han in the West Wing and is used as the embodiment of Khan, for whom No literal English translation. It's a state of mind. From the soul, really. Sadness. The sadness is so deep, no tears will come. And yet there is hope. In the 2002 film The Pianist this composition is on the soundtrack. It is included in the soundtrack to the 2004 film The Notebook. The play is featured in the 1961 British thriller Taste of Fear (US title: Scream of Fear). It is used in the soundtrack to the film, Death Wish II (1982), although the composition is attributed to Jimmy Page. Halfway through the 1931 film Street Scene, the prelude was faintly played in one of the apartments as a piano-violin duo. This play plays in the opening scene of the second season of 100, when Clark is in quarantine in Mount Weather. The unsized adaptation of this play appears on the soundtrack to the film A Tale of Two Cities, acting as the theme of the condemned seamstress. Characters Meryl Streep and Simon Helberg play this play together in a poignant moment in the 2016 film Florence Foster Jenkins. In Season 3 of Episode 3 of The Flash, this song can be heard in the background of the restaurant scene. In 1945, the British film The Place of Your Own shows the play when the ghost first possesses Annette (portrait of Margaret Lockwood). This part is mentioned in the book Fifty Shades of Grey and appears in the film of the same name. Jazz combo plays piece with Interlude in the 1938 Austrian film Der Hampelmann Karlheinz Martin in a nightclub scene starring Hilde Krahl and Fritz van Dongen Austrian director Ulrich Seidl uses a tango version of the prelude for a strip scene and at the end of the title of his film 2001 Dog Days piece plays in Star Trek: The Next Generation Episode of the Masterpiece Society. Adaptations and covers of The Gerry Mulligan Sextet recorded a jazz arrangement of a composition called Prelude in E Minor, which appeared on their 1963 album Night Lights. Ambient chiptune musical arrangement called Continuum Rich Vreeland plays during the normal end of the video game Fez. French rap group Supr'me NTM tried it for their song That's My People. Musician Rob Dugan composed and recorded the song Clubbed To Death 2, which uses prelude for most of its musical structure. Don Byron covered Prelude No. 4 on the clarinet with a track called Charlie's Prelude on his album Bug Music. Serge Gainsbourg based his 1969 song Jane B on this prelude. Radiohead's song Exit Music (For a Film), which was written for Romeo and Juliet and was included on the ok Computer album, is based on Prelude No. 4. Other musicians, such as Jimmy Page of the legendary rock band Led Zeppelin, have also made modern arrangements of this piece. The 1999 video game soundtrack Age of Empires II features the song Pork Parts written by Stephen Rippy, based on this play. Another, Benjamin Sander, talks in detail about the prelude to negotiations (the most notable of which is his appearance at TED2008) to convince the public that classical music is pleasant to everyone. Preludes are independent full-fledged plays, although they are also performed as a full cycle. The most famous of the 24, without a doubt, is the Raindrop Prelude, on. 28, No. It is also the longest. The opening bars of The Raindrop Prelude The Simple Prelude can be reproduced by average pianists. On the other hand, more complex preludes, of course, should not be underestimated and very virtuoso by nature, and this is one of the most difficult pieces in the piano solo repertoire. Sometimes they are played by professional pianists at various performances. As with Chopin's other works, these preludes were not named or described further. This contrasts with many of The Liszt and Schumann's works. Nicknamed Raindrop Prelude for Foreplay on. 28, No. 15 is now ubiquitous. This is unlike other names that are little used. His prelude is astounding. 28 No. 4 in E minor. The piece is only one page long and uses a downward line melody. The melody begins with a dominant B and works its way to a tonic E, but halfway through a piece of downward line is interrupted and the melody starts again. Only in the last bars the melody dissolves into a tonic and passes through a chord progression to a soothing and satisfying E minor chord. Thus, the last measure is the only one with a terrestrial chord and a tonic in the form of a melody. Chopin also liked the play, and it was played at his funeral at his request. Toonaard Chopin wrote his 24 preludes in all 24 known tones in Western music: twelve basic and twelve minor scales, inspired by Das Wohltemperierte Clavier Bach. Chopin uses the principle of ordering twelve preludes in twelve basic tonal types (odd numbers), about twelve preludes in the corresponding, parallel secondary type of tone (even numbers). The distance between the key of each subsequent main prelude (1 in C, 3 in G, 5 in D...) is that of the fifth, this arrangement is the principle of the fifth circle. The same goes for successive parallel minor preludes (2 in, 4 in e, 6 in b...). The order used by Bach in his two books of 24 preludes (and fugue), Das wohltemperierte Klavier, is that of a chromatic scale; it's consecutive white and intermediate black keys on the piano: Prelude (and Fugue) 1 in C (big), Prelude 3 in Cis, Prelude 5 in D; Prelude 2 in c (small), 4 in cis, 6 in d. In terms of music theory, the order of chopin (in the fifth circle) is more natural: C large (and there are only white piano keys as the base, the scales G large and the electronic small have one cross (black piano key), D large and B small have two crosses, large and fis small have three, and so on. This raises the morality behind the piece of music. For example, in prelude No. 24 showing the tempo of Allegro Appassionato the intention is to bring the passion of the piano to play in a piece of music. Many professional pianists also make this tempi clear in preludes and others make a piece of their own, bending different instructions according to their own hand.
