Buffy the vampire slayer spike shirt

Image: The WB Is there anything more amazing than Buffy the Vampire Slayer? Not if you're a real Buffy fan. While some people think of the film Buffy the Vampire Slayer that came out in 1992, most are fans of the television show of the same name that aired from 1997 to 2003. The show followed Buffy Summers, played by Sarah Michelle Gellar, her mentor Giles, and her friends Xander, Willow and Cordelia as they battle vampires, demons and other varied monsters. It seems buffy was chosen and his destiny is to keep humanity safe from evil. Although initially she is totally upset about it, as she prefers to go shopping at the mall and all that, soon she embraces her fate. Buffy the Vampire Slayer has all kinds of rabid fans who can say just about anything about the show and take great pride in their knowledge of all things Buffy. Are you one of them? And although I've re-watched the show in its entirety several times, wow I never really appreciate all the most dated moments from the Buffy pilot episode so far. In addition to all the wonderful 90s fashion moments in Buffy to be enjoyed, there's also the soundtrack, pop culture references, dialogue style and even style of footage that stand out as being some of the most dated things about Buffy. But in a good way. It's been 20 years since Buffy debuted, and although the show has obviously dated, it's just the sweetest for him. It's also worth noting, that this list includes moments dated to Welcome To The Hellmouth, Buffy's pilot episode, but also the second episode, The Harvest. And that's simply because Welcome to Hellmouth ended in a cliffhanger, and I've always considered them both parts of the pilot. Also, once I started watching the pilot, I just couldn't stop watching the next episode instantly either. You know how it is. So here, I present to you all the most dated moments of these two episodes, and just know that I mean all the following statements with absolute, total love.1. Sunnydale High has no security systemDarla and your man snack manage to invade Sunnydale High without triggering a single alarm. The '90s. Times so much simpler. 2. Xander is introduced sailing awkwardly in high school on his skate All the way in, which involves a whole set of noisy and goofy warnings to his classmates as he falls through them, it's so beautifully 90's that it deserves to be put in some kind of museum. 3. It's Full of weird and false-false terms in these two episodes alone, we are presented with buffyspeak of the 90s as the phrase, What's the sitch?, which everyone seems to say and the term, it gives me the wiggins, to insinuate that Buffy is afraid of something. 4. James Spader is inexplicably Cordelia and Buffy's Go-To Dream Babel means, I totally understand - Spader of the 80s and 90s was a kind of totally irresistible, if incredibly despicable, dream boat. But yes, you can't handle it very well now.5. The size of these computer monitors enormous. I love them. 6. This high-tech computer interface. So, on the cutting edge. 7. The fact that Cordelia sincerely believes that the exclusion key is known as Deliver KeyWillow cunningly tells Cordelia that the Deliver key is the one that will save her work. Unbelievably, she falls for it, which is a dirty trick that just wouldn't work with teenagers in 2017. 8. Cordelia insults Willow by inferring that she shopping at SearsOoh. Sick burn. Especially when you consider that a 16-year-old girl is basically dressed as a soccer mom at a fundraiser throughout this episode. 9. Those Flat Flat Specials adjust your televisions, guys. This wavy screen is just Buffy showing you that something really supernatural is happening. 10. This To Be Continued Freeze FrameAbsolutely classic. I don't know what I love the most, the fact that the image in which the scene is frozen is completely uncertain, or that delicious Gothic type.11. The entire credit sequence The 90s were an unambiguous golden era for opening credit sequences. And the buffy, with its iconic Nerf Herder theme and sound effects (I love this bubbly cauldron) is the absolute best. 12. Giles referring to the Internet as The Network and looking horrified about its existenceHe is completely disgusted by the rise of the digital age, and I am absolutely here for this. 13. Giles' inability to use a computerClearly, Willow is the first person to use that computer in the school library.14. Giles' general legitimacy as a school librarian in these difficult times of funding cuts, I find it incredible that Sunnydale High can afford to employ a full-time librarian. Especially when it seems that Xander, Willow and Buffy are the only students actually using the place. And also when you consider that Giles continues to have super heated discussions with Buffy (the new student) in the corridors of the royal school, without principal Flutie pulling him to one side for his inappropriate conduct. 15. Buffy's Lavender Eyeshadow and Pink Lip Gloss ComboSuch a winning look. 16. Buffy's Shiny, Blue PantsI know that whenever I want to do something athletic, like fighting vampires, that I also choose the brightest and most uncomfortable pants possible to do it in Addition, what fabric are these? Leather? Satin? We may never know. 17. Buffy wearing a baby blue shirt like a jacket was also guilty of this look back in the 90s and I definitely don't want to talk about it. 18. Xander's portfolio chainthis is no longer a thing. Which is a shame, because that look used to make me crazy when I was a teenager. Please don't judge me. 19. Xander's haircut the 90s were a person, so they would probably have that haircut. 20. Angel velvet blazer and wide-collared shirt, I know vampires in Buffy wear clothes that are deliberately dated but sweet mercy. That's something else. 21. The pure bulk of Cordelia's HairA whole bottle of mousse before drying and combing the back for centuries. 22. Giles' adorable Whiteboard presentation on the Coming Apocalypses, this seems like an appropriate place and way to draw up plans about that devastating event that I should be keeping secret. Maybe I should write the word Hellmouth even bigger so the whole school can see it. Or maybe I should hide this work within a password-protected computer instead. 23. This movie reference I had to look up when Buffy is trying to convince Xander not to go to the vampire vampire to save Jesse, she tells him: Don't go all wild in me. Which I think is a reference to the 1969 western in which an outlaw gang plans a final, and extremely violent job. The point is that it was a reference dated in 1997, but in 2017, it seems completely obscure. 24. This chic edition between scenesFirst we are watching Xander and Buffy stealthily through the underground tunnels, and then the scene is being eliminated from the screen by a showing Giles in the library. It's perfect and wonderful, and a lot of the weather. 25. This band totally 90s that is playing the bronzeand you were an alt-rocker with long hair, who regularly wore a buttoned shirt, cargo shorts, tube socks and high sneakers in the 90s, so you probably played on stage at bronze at some point. 26. Alternative Rock is the only genre of music sunnydale knows, Sunnydale loves alternative rock. Not only is Buffy's soundtrack full of alternative rock hits (I love it), but even Cordelia is shown screaming: I love this song! about a grunted and thought-out guitar song that no popular high school character will ever, ever, show love. I think I speak for everyone when I say that buffy's pilot episode is probably one of the biggest in TV history. And yes, now that I've started watching for the thousandth time, I'm probably going to have to watch the whole show again. A fact I'm totally enjoying. Savoring.
