The first John Deere 1010 tractors came out of the factory gates in 1960 and continued to build them until 1965. Make sure you have access to your serial tractor number because there is a chance that the parts of the John Deere 1010 that you need depend on this serial number. Typically, the serial number is printed on the plate on the engine block, the right side. This serial number is determined by the year of production, so for the model of 1960, it starts with 10001, for the model of 1961 it starts in 13692, for the model of 1962 it starts from 23630, for the model of 1963 Starts with 32188, for the 1964 model it starts at 43900, for the 1965 model it starts with 53722, for the final model it starts with 57312. They also have mechanical disc brakes. Type I 3-point hitch is very reliable. It is also noted that the rear PTO transmission works at 540 rpm.
