data was analyzed with the correlation coefficient. The correlation coefficient was determined for the relationships among the constructs. The zero-order correlations were computed using the personal experience and the results were interpreted in the context of the theoretical framework. The results indicated that the empowering leadership questionnaire measured five dimensions of leadership, including empowering behaviors. The study was designed to assess the relationship between the empowering leadership questionnaire and other variables such as organizational commitment, job satisfaction, and job performance. The results showed significant positive relationships between empowering leadership and these variables. The findings suggested that empowering leadership has a positive impact on employee well-being and organizational performance. The study also highlighted the importance of developing empowering leadership styles in organizations to enhance employee engagement, motivation, and overall job satisfaction.
Overall, the study contributed to the understanding of the role of empowering leadership in work settings and provided practical implications for managers and organizations.
