Below are a few instructions on how to customize the main features for your Falco Pro DVR series. Links If you check the back of your camera, you will find two separate leads. Lead power, and video lead. They must be connected to appropriate appropriate leads on the Siamese cable. At the end of the DVR, the video will lead to the appropriate video entering on the DVR. The power lead will be connected to the camera's power grid. Hard Drive If you purchased a hard drive from Luxor, it will come to you pre-installed. It should also be formatted for use already. However, if you get a scrolling HDD FAIL message you will need to complete the HDD process. To do this, log in to the menu and scroll down to SETUP and then HDD. From the HDD menu, select MODE and then MODE again from the HDD FORMAT menu. Confirm by clicking ENTER when asked. Please note that this is not a necessary step if you do not receive an HDD FAIL message or if you are installing your own HDD. If you add your own, you will need to remove the outer case and provide a hard drive for bracket mounting. Connect a red data cable and a multi-color power cable to applicable ports on the back of the hard drive. Replace the outer shell. Power the DVR and complete the HDD procedure as above. Record DVR records automatically, by default, in normal mode and motion recording mode. If you have a formatted HDD installed and cameras are connected, DVR records. You can check this forever if the movement and normal recording percentage (bottom right of the screen) flash. You might want to edit frame rate, resolution, recording mode, and recording quality. They can be modified from Pre Camera, Camera and Scheduled Record sections to the menu. Please consult with your user guide for more information. To log in to the DVR system (playback, system configuration...) you must first log in. This is done from the main menu under the LOGIN option. The default admin username and password aa and 11. Remote viewing of the Falco Pro Series DVR can be set up for remote viewing and administration. There is a very thorough walk to explain this process at remoterview setup.
