

I'm not robot

Continue

Other words for also in spanish

And confirming that you are 13 years of age or older. Copyright © 2020 Infespace Holdings, LLC, a System1 company keep up with the latest daily discussion with BuzzFeed Daily Newspaper! Previous Previous Usually some are saying that they consider it worthwhile. They don't want their listeners to read a text, see their fingernails, or pet a dog on the street for bowing down. A speaker wants all eyes on them. It gives them the value to know what they're saying. Eye contact is very powerful. It can relay many things without anything being said. Currently, this is more important than ever with the Covid-19 pandemic. People cannot see your whole face, but they can definitely read your eyes. By eye contact, I do not mean a hard, creepy stare - just to make a gaze at the speaker's directive. Make it a point the next time you're in talks to maintain eye contact with your speaker. Avoid the temptation to look anywhere but on their faces. I know it's not easy, especially if you're not interested in what they're talking about. But as I said, you can redirect the conversation in a different direction or just find the person you know you've got to be. The final thoughts will carefully add to your relationship with someone in your life. Now, more than ever, when people are so disconnected because of smartphones and social media, listening skills are important. You can build better, more honest, and deeper relationships by simply going there, paying attention, and asking questions that look like the speaker matters like what they have to say. And isn't it a great goal? People feel like they talk? So, go out and start hon. You've got two great ears. Use them now! More tips on how to be a better listenerFeatured photo Credit: Joshua Rodriguez via unsplash.com unsplash.com