After this, get Java JDK. After installation of Java JDK, install Apache Tomcat to check the installation. After Tomcat installation, change Tomcat port number. To do so, open Tomcat/conf/server.xml file and set new Port number to your desired port. Open the Web browser and go to This will open the Tomcat manager page. In this screen, click 'Server Status'. This will open the server information page. Find your web application's code folder path and Click on 'Deploy' button. Here, you will find your web application's war file. Select it and click 'Deploy' button. It will take some time. Click on 'Refresh' button to see the deployed application. Click on the checkbox beside the Web Application name and click 'Start' button. In your browser, click on to see your Web Application. And there you go! In this post, I have shown only three steps to start with the Java EE application, but there are several other things that you have to check before deploying your application. For more information, you can visit the following sites. Conclusion: In this tutorial, we have seen a way to deploy the Java EE application. This will be a good technique if you want to deploy Java EE application. But this is the very first attempt to deploy a Java EE application in AWS. It has some common and some uncommon issues. We will see what exactly is happening and how to address the issues. So, stay tuned for the next tutorial.

Health-care disparities in the US in academic year 2003: comparison with the nation. Using data from the 2003 National Health Interview Survey, we identified health-care disparities in a nationally representative sample of adults in the US. Participants were adults aged 18 and older who had a usual source of care (no recent gaps in coverage >6 months) and who reported having at least 1 major health condition or disability. We used the selected conditions to assign respondents to 10 mutually exclusive racial/ethnic groups. We compared the prevalence of reporting receiving needed care from a usual source, by selected race/ethnicity, health condition, and disability. The final sample included 520fdb1ae7
