The United States is home to many political and religious leaders who are opposed to same-sex marriage, and they feel that they have the right to protest a civil marriage ceremony performed by a pastor who does not agree with their anti-gay views. Jim Garlow's congregation, Skyline Church, hosted a wedding for two women and a man in May of 2015, when a group of protestors showed up at the ceremony. They were protesting the ceremony because Garlow performed the wedding in the morning and the groom was waiting at the church in the evening for the women to arrive. The men from the protestors were not willing to leave and were physically aggressive and disrespectful to the couple and Garlow, in addition to refusing to leave the premises until they were escorted out by the police. I reached out to the couple and they told me how much they appreciated Garlow's willingness to perform the wedding in the morning. They told me that Garlow is an amazing pastor who has taken the time to provide a safe space for the community in which they live. The couple told me that they are willing to have the wedding ceremony again in the future and that they are more than pleased with the experience. Pastor Garlow's congregation is also quite divided on the issue of same-sex marriage and their church is one of the few in the United States that are willing to perform civil marriages for same-sex couples. Garlow has been preaching about how God calls all people to love one another and he has been promoting the idea that all people are equal and deserving of the same rights as others. Pastor Garlow has been in the news lately because of his willingness to be in the spotlight and his outspoken support of homosexuality and the equality of all people.
