Jumping onto the scene, Bekey released his debut record, Light Ends and was the winner of BBC's Sound of 2011, with later winning at the BBC Radio 2 Teen Awards 2011. Following his festival breakthrough, he was added to the line-up at Glastonbury Festival 2011. In November 2011, in advance of his UK and European tour, it was announced that he had left his previous record label, One Little Indian. In February 2012, Bekey announced that he had left EMI. It was also announced that he would be releasing new material on his own label, Diamonds In The Ghetto. In March 2012, BBC Radio 1 DJ Zane Lowe premiered Bekey's track, "Bust The Casket", which featured rapper Wiley. Having released his first album on One Little Indian, the next album was released on 8 June 2013, titled Automaton. Style and influences Bekey's style has been described as "stadium pop". Bekey's songwriting is mainly influenced by pop music, with all of his songs containing "a hook" or "catchy chorus". He has said that he was inspired by artists such as David Guetta and Calvin Harris. He named Jessie J, Katy Perry, Florence and the Machine and Rihanna as his musical influences. In an interview with The Independent, he described himself as "a big pop fan", saying that "when you're writing a pop song, I try and make it really poppy and catchy". He has also cited house music as an influence. In an interview with Music Week, he said that he was "really into London house and heavily 520fdb1ae7
