A test of a semiconductor product before it is shipped is a very important step for manufacturing semiconductor products. The test of a semiconductor product before it is shipped is performed by a test device for simultaneously testing a plurality of semiconductor products. In a test device, contact pins for testing are arranged on a carrier. A semiconductor product is placed on the carrier with the contact pins contacting terminals of the semiconductor product. Since the structure of a semiconductor product is complicated, it is difficult to use such a test device. Namely, the contact pins and a connector for connecting the contact pins to an external testing apparatus are positioned on the carrier. Thus, the carrier is larger than the semiconductor product. The larger carrier is more difficult to handle. Therefore, it is impossible to test a plurality of semiconductor products by using a test device. Moreover, the test is performed by contacting a plurality of terminals of a semiconductor product with the contact pins of the test device. Thus, the semiconductor product needs to be placed on the carrier in a position where it can be in contact with the contact pins. It is difficult to set the semiconductor product on the carrier in an accurate position. There's no time for a big-hit parade in Paris tonight. This very tight race will be decided by the most meticulous of margins. We're talking a few votes, just enough to push an outlier over the threshold and into the runoff. AD First the good news: There's a pretty decent chance that Marine Le Pen of the far-right National Front party will make it to a runoff, according to a new poll. She is now running neck and neck with independent candidate Emmanuel Macron, the independent centrist who rocketed
