Amazon Don't mess with Texas or these favorite movies. Whether these best Texas movies were actually shot there or it's just setting a fictional plot, they all do a great job paying tribute to all the people who love about Lone Star State. From black-and-white Western movies to more modern comedies focused on the struggling corporate world, these films on the Texan theme will keep you entertained for hours. If you're in the mood for something serious, watch No Country for Old Men (and find out why he won four Oscars). If you have a lot of time to kill, Boyhood will captivate you for what seems like 12 years. If a horror movie is what you're looking for, you can't go wrong with the Texas Chainsaw Massacre. We're not sure if everything is actually more in Texas, but we know something different: Every movie from the great southern state is definitely worth watching! (And don't miss our best westerns on Netflix, movies about the south, and the best farm movies.) December 1, 2000 2 min read This story appears in the December 2000 issue of the entrepreneur. Sign up for tech entrepreneurs in Lone Star State who are looking for equity could be eligible for a bridge loan of up to $200,000 through a new $2 million SeedStage Angel Club Fast Money fund managed by Silicon Valley Bank. SeedStage is a venture accelerator from Austin that prepares entrepreneurs to find equity. Here's how the credit program works: Ideally, SeedStage is looking for entrepreneurs who have at least six months of sweat equity invested in the enterprise. The business concept should be capable of producing at least $100 million in sales for the firm in the industry with at least $500 million in market capitalization. In addition, the business should be able to bring 50-fold return on investment. Start the process by registering for a $250 membership in SeedStage on www.seedstage.com. Registration is accompanied by an invitation to attend a seedStage quick meeting where you will give a mock 15-minute presentation to your partner team. This is followed by 15 minutes of candid feedback, updated video recording and email comments. Candidates who have potentially funded ideas are then invited to participate in three to four months of coaching programs. After 30 days of intensive care, they can get a Fast Money loan with the approval of a simple majority of the Angelic SeedStage basin.
