A journey into the interior landscapes of Neil Gaiman's mind. An essay and conversations with America's greatest living writer. A journey into the interior landscapes of Neil Gaiman's mind. Neil Gaiman has a remarkable way with words. A writer who writes both for and about children, he has created and published more than 30 books and scripts for television and film. He has won multiple awards for his work, including the Hugo Award for best novel and the World Fantasy Award for Life Achievement. Published in 2014. Quoted and introduced by Neil Gaiman "Well, then, the truth is that I'm a compulsive liar. Which is hardly surprising. I am a writer. And when you're a writer, you have to make things up. All the time. And I'm one of those people, one of those writers, who spins lies into fairy tales and then pretends that they are the truth.

The fables, the tall tales, the tall silver lies, they are the path by which I find my way. The truth is that I am compulsive. I mean, not lying. And, well, perhaps I should be more honest with you. The truth is that I'm a writer who's had a very successful career. Not at all to my surprise. The truth is that I am extremely proud of what I have written. I am not ashamed. It is not the truth, but I know that the truth is that I am a writer who's had a very successful career. I am proud. I feel I should be. I am in my 60s, and I have, what, hundreds of thousands of books in print. I know that I've done a lot of good in the world. But I am also aware, I know, that I've done a lot of damage. It's a strange thing, when you think about it, isn't it? The fact that the truth is that I'm a writer who's had a very successful career. I am proud. I feel I should be. I am in my 60s, and I have, what, hundreds of thousands of books in print. I know that I've done a lot of good in the world. But I am also aware, I know, that I've done a lot of damage.
