

EFFECTIVE COMMUNICATION

SEMINAR FOR LEADERS

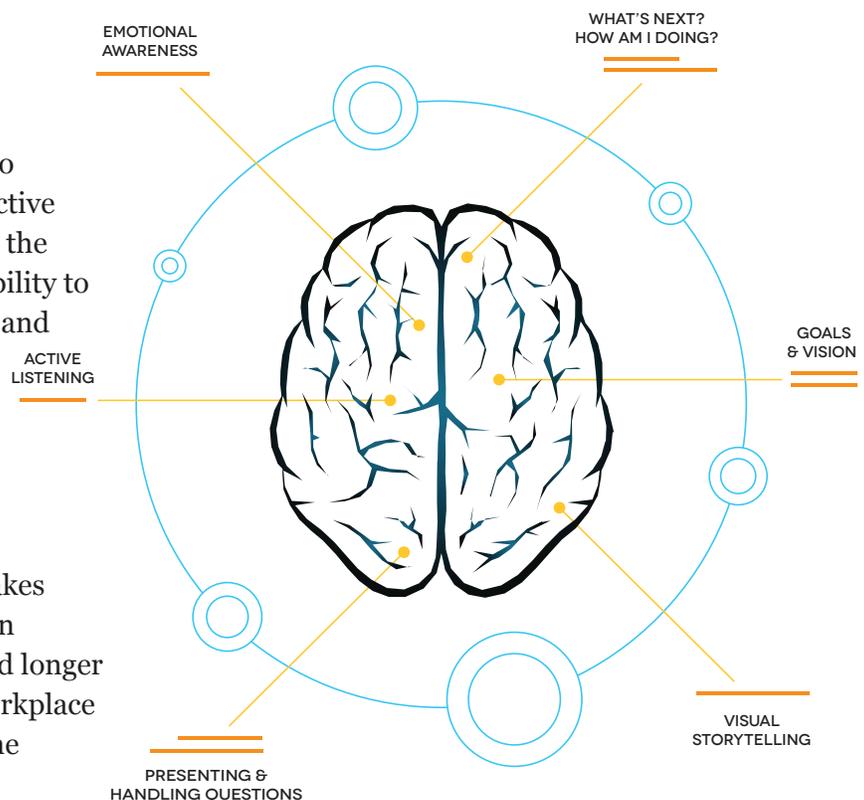

THE NEUROSCIENCE OF COMMUNICATION

Communicating effectively is essential for high functioning organizations and is a core competency of strong leadership. Without it, brilliant strategies never get traction, essential customer relationships and loyalty withers, employees become disengaged, and information critical for success becomes distorted and never reaches key stakeholders.

There is a reason human beings invented communication – it has a specific purpose driven by hard-wired needs programmed into the brain. Understanding the science of effective communication allows leaders at all levels in the organization to significantly improve their ability to engage and connect with employees, clients, and other key stakeholders.

PARTICIPANTS WILL LEARN HOW TO MORE EFFECTIVELY:

- communicate like a true leader
- avoid ten common communication mistakes
- organize and convey complex information
- deliver messages that will be remembered longer
- navigate difficult conversations in the workplace
- answer the toughest questions in real time

This half-day workshop is designed to deliver a multitude of sophisticated speaking and presentation skills that will allow attendees to communicate with greater ease and clarity, to better manage tough conversations, and to inspire positivity.

A TRACK RECORD OF SUCCESS

The professionals at E3 Solutions have been delivering this approach for over 20 years to Fortune 100 companies, the highest levels in government, and to thousands of CEOs in North America and Great Britain. Participants frequently rate the workshop as “the most important professional training I have ever received.”

Don Rheem is CEO of E3 Solutions, a provider of employee workplace metrics which allows organizations to build engaged, high-performance cultures. Rheem focuses on using science-backed research to consult with leaders at all levels within an organization. His passion for delivering truly outstanding improvements in business performance conveys quickly to the CEOs and key executives he works with.