You can expect decent performance when you run this game on a 4k resolution. Although PCSX4 ver. 1.2.4 fixes most of the graphics lags that are encountered during a high-resolution game, there are some sound synchronization problems that can occur on Maxwell and Polaris based on the GPU due to the inconsistency of I/O speed. Playing Spiderman on 4K requires a beefy GPU but you can still enjoy this game at lower resolutions even with your old GPU. At 1440p graphics so far, look incredible if you're running on a 4k display. you need a minimum GTX 1070 to run this game at 60FPS at 1440p resolution. This game displays more than 3 gigabytes of textures, so you need at least 4GB of graphics cards. Even a budget GPU like the GTX 1060 can run this game at 60FPS at 1080p, which is impressive. The game will still play on outdated gpus processors such as the GTX 9xx and GTX 7xx. When we curved the graphics at the highest setting, which is larger than the console offers, we got about 40-50 fps. There are some problems with hood and subtitles as they tend to tremble sometimes, but the overall gameplay is buttery smooth. We recommend disabling the subtitles until we fix it in the next release of PCSX4. Check out the video below for SpiderMan (2018) PC gameplay performance.
