The dungeon is available starting with the Search for the Curse of Corsair, but it must be completed to gain access to the nearby shore east of the cave entrance. It can also be reached through the Corsair Cove resource zone, which requires the completion of Dragon Slayer. They drop the high cost of run equipment, run and uncircumcised gems. Ogresses can be safely killed using safespots. Full green d'hide and power amulet are recommended for maximum F2P range bonus. The Corsair Cove bank can be used to store the loot, otherwise high-level alchemy may allow you to stay in the dungeon for a longer time. In: Cities, Places, Curse of Corsair, Old School-exclusive content share Corsair Cove is a small port city located on the south shore of Feldip Hills. It is isolated from the rest of the area by large impassable rocks. Unlike much of the western part of the world map, the bay is available for free players. He appears in the search for the Curse of Corsair. The Transport Features area has a bank that can only be given after the Corsair Curse quest, polling booth, and three clean/bait fishing spots southwest of the city. The Haris resource zone to the north-west of the port is a resource zone of Corsair Cove, which is only available after the Dragon Slayer is completed. Talking to Haris after the quest will give you access to this resource area. Area features: Corsair Cove Dungeon there are two access points in the dungeon: through a hole west of the bay and through a cave inside the Haris Resources area. It's a useful place for both members and free players to fight level 82 Ogress Warriors and Ogress Shamans, which feature a rune full steering wheel, a lymph turns root and shaman mask drops. To the north of the underground dungeon is the place with 5 coals, 2 mitrilya and 1 adamantite rocks. The Southeast is an inaccessible bank vault. In the south-west is the entrance to the dungeon of the Guild of Myths. In: Dungeons, Curse of Corsair, Old School-exclusive content Share Corsair Cove Dungeon is a large cave system under the southern part of Feldip Hills. It is mainly home to ogres, although western caves are part of the Myth Guild. An overview of the East Side East side of the dungeon is available to all players. It contains only the warriors of Ogress, Shamans of Ogress and several Spiders. To the east is the ogre bank vault, which serves as a decoration. Francois, Arsene's brother, can be seen digging to the vault, with ogresses none wiser. To the northwest is a mining site that requires dragon Slayer to be completed for access. Players can access the site from the dungeon north of the bridge, which requires a level 15 in agility to use. This site has four coals, two mitrilya and one adamantite rock. The west side of the Cave, which is the basement of the Myth Guild, is only accessible to members who have completed Dragon Slayer II. Here, players will find the Uld Fountain, which can be used to replenish necklace skills, combat bracelets and glory amulets, and a small mine containing 4 adamantite rocks and 2 runite rocks. All chromatic dragons can be found here, in addition to 6 blue dragon scale spawning. The exit from the south leads to a small island south of the Guild and contains an altar of anger where players can create angry run and run and run. He added an actual endgame for F2P, Giving them access to the Maple Trees-Cage/Harpoon spots near Bank-Mithril and Adamant Ora near the bank- More places to cut Yew Trees high-level monsters with a decent drop for F2PIt requires Dragon Slayer to complete so it's relatively protected from bots, and on 500 entire worlds it's the perfect small endgame haven for F2Pers to work towards communication as well as foreshadowing a massive area you'll get to. My F2P friends who got through mobile love the game and those who reached the bay love it, thanks for the good content of newcomer JagexPage 2 2
