

I'm not robot

Continue

Evan almighty full movie in english

Evan AlmightyTheatric release posterDirectorTom ShadyacProducersTom Shadyak Gary Barber Roger Birnbaum Neil X. Moritz Michael Bosstick Scenario Steve OedekerKStory Steve OedekerKJoel Cohen Alec Falkons BasedCharactersby Steve KorenMark O'KeefeStarring Steve Carell Morgan Freeman Lauren Graham Graham John Goodman John Goodman John Higgins Jimmy Bennett Wanda Sykes Music John DebnayCinematographyy BakerEdited by Scott HillProduction 007 (2007-06-22) Running 96 minutes (1)CountryUnited StatesLanguageEnglishBudget $175 millionBoxing office $173.4 millionEvan Almighty is a 2007 American sci-fi comedy disaster movie, and standalone sequel and spin-off Bruce Almighty (2003). The film is directed by Tom Shadack, written by Steve Oedekir, based on the characters created by Steve Koren and Mark O'Keefe from the original film. Starring Steve Carell and Morgan Freeman reprising their roles as Evan Baxter and God, respectively, with newcomers Lauren Graham and John Goodman. Production of the film began in January 2006. Several visual effects companies have been used to provide CGI for numerous animals and climate flood scenes. The main plot is a modern retelling of Noah's Ark. By the time the film finished production, it had become the most expensive comedy film in history (this record later overtook Men in Black 3). In October 2007, the film was released on DVD and HD DVD. The film opened on June 22, 2007, and made less than its budget of $175 million worldwide, receiving generally negative reviews from critics. Evan Almighty was also a box office bomb. PETA claimed that the animals used in the film were mistreated, but Universal Pictures insisted that the animals were treated humanely. Newly elected to Congress, former local television news reporter Evan Baxter (Steve Carell) leaves his hometown of Buffalo, New York, and then moves to the Prestige Cross community, located in the fictional city of Huntsville, Va., where his congressional campaign officially declares that he will change the world. Evan prays to God (Morgan Freeman) to give him this opportunity. His wife, Joan (Lauren Graham), also prays that she, Evan and their three sons Dylan (Johnny Simmons), Jordan (Graham Phillips) and Ryan (Jimmy Bennett) will be closer together as a family. On his first day, Evan receives a letter from his greedy boss, Congressman Chuck Long (John Goodman), who gives him the prime office and the opportunity to join Long as a junior co-sponsor of the Public Lands Integration Bill (CINPLAN). Over the next few days, strange events occur in Evan's life: eight wastelands in Prestige Cross are purchased under his name, and ancient tools and gophers of wood Over there. Couples of animals start following him wherever he goes. He uncontrollably begins to grow a beard that keeps instantly growing no matter how many times it shaves. Number 614 begins to appear in various forms throughout its daily life. Evan comes to realize that this number actually refers to verse 14 in Chapter 6 of Genesis, where God instructs Noah to build an ark in preparation for the impending flood. Although Evan initially rejects this idea, God himself begins to appear to Evan in various guises, assuring him that a flood will come and the only way Evan can change the world is to build an ark. Evan himself decides to start building an ark with tools and materials provided, giving him the opportunity to get closer to his sons, although Joan sees this as a midlife crisis. While Evan still retains his congressional career, his appearance alienates his three collaborators, Rita Daniels (Wanda Sykes), Mary Stringer (John Michael Higgins), and Eugene Tennanbaum (Jonah Hill), and the animals that follow him around the world become very destructive. God appears and gives Evan a robe, and warns him that the flood will come in the middle of the day on September 22. When Evan puts on a robe, he discovers that he is unable to wear any other clothes, a robe seemingly displacing everything else that he wears. Outraged by Evan's lazy appearance, Long removed his name from the public lands bill. Believing that Evan has gone mad, Joan leaves him, forcing Evan to continue to build the ark alone. Later, God masquerades as a waiter and talks to Joan in the restaurant, assuring her that she should see this as an opportunity for the whole family to get closer together. Joan is inspired and finally returns with the children to help Evan finish the ark to prepare for the flood. On September 22, Evan's staff showed him evidence that Long planned to build the Prestige Cross after it had stolen a nearby water source, but Long cut many corners in the construction of the dam. Officers suspect Long will do the same with the State Land Bill. With the ark full, the police are trying to destroy it with a wrecking ball, as it violates the land codes. When the animals begin to load the ark, and the rain falls, Evan realizes that the flood will be the result of the failure of the Long Dam. It warns onlookers to get on board the ark as the dam really breaks down, destroying all the Prestige Cross. The Ark later flooded the streets of Washington, D.C., and stops in front of the Capitol, interrupting a vote for the state's land bill. This leads to Evan accusing Long of cutting spending in that responsibility for the dam failure, leading to a number of other members of Congress voting against Long investigated for speculation, while all animals return to their natural habitats. Evan is finally reinstated in Congress, with all the changes imposed on him by God-given God There's no more left. Evan meets God again during the campaign, and God declares that Evan's life is now perfect as he prayed, being closer to his family and changed the world for the better through his One Act of Random Kindness (ARK). Starring Steve Carell as Evan Baxter, a former news reporter who is now Congressman Morgan Freeman as God Lauren Graham as Joan Baxter, Evan's wife John Goodman as Congressman Chuck Long, senior congressman John Michael Higgins as Marty Stringer, Evan Chief of Staff Jimmy Bennett as Ryan Baxter, Evan and Joan's youngest son Graham Phillips as Jordan Evan and Joan Wanda Sykes' eldest son as Rita Daniels, Evan's Assistant Jonah Hill as Eugene Tennanbaum, co-employee Evan Molly Shannon as Eva Adams, Baxters real estate agent Ed Helms as Ark Reporter Rachel Harris as Ark Reporter Brian Howe as builder Harvey Presnell as Congressman Burroughs Madison Mason as Congressman Stamp Jim Dauen cameo appearance, as he himself is Katherine Bell as Susan Ortega (Unaccounted for) Mail Flanagan as Mail Carrier Lisa Arch and Simon Helberg as collaborators David Barrera and Ed Helms as Ark Reporters Ruth Williamson as neighbor Jim Douhan as neighbor Michael Roper as Congressional Reporter Emily Eby as Animal Wrangler Bart Bear 2 and Honey Bump as Bear In April 2004 The script was sold to Sony Pictures in a deal worth $2.5 million plus a percentage of the profits, recording for a script specification from previously unprose those writers. Universal Studios immediately struck a deal to co-profile the script with Sony and forced Steve Oedekirk to rewrite it as a sequel to Bruce Almighty. Steve Oedekirk was involved with Bruce Almighty as executive producer and co-writer of the script (with Steve Koren and Mark O'Keefe, who wrote the story). Later, the studio completely abandoned the original script The Passion of the Ark, and Oedekirk fashioned a new script from scratch (only he got the final credit for the finished film as a screenwriter). Jim Carrey was asked to reprise his role as Bruce in the sequel and when he refused, director Tom Shadyac persuaded Steve Carell to take the lead role. Shadyac, reflecting on the first film, said: Carell put some of the funniest things in the film. We thought, Why not take this character and turn it into another movie? casting Jim Carrey refused to reprise his role from the original Bruce Almighty. While Kerry did act in the sequel to Ace Ventura: Pet he said he's not a big fan of doing the same character twice. It was the third time a sequel to the film had been made for which Kerry had refused to reprise his role; other Dumb and Dumberer and Son masks. The budget's initial budget, about $140 million, led Evan Almighty to become the most expensive comedy film ever made. Additional costs such as set construction, visuals, and problems with shooting multiple animals in a controlled location brought the budget to $175 million. The ballooning budget forced Sony to abandon the project and completely hand it over to Universal Studios. Part of the budget was Carell's salary, where he earned $5 million for his starring role. The Virginia film estimated that the film brought Virginia $20-25 million, with most of the film in the Charlottesville area. Universal defended the cost of the film, saying it was designed as a four-quadrant film, and therefore ready for more profit than typical comedy. The design of the Ark and the construction of the Ark, preparing for the filming of the scene Building the Ark, began in January 2006, and scenes with the participation of the Ark were filmed in a division of Crozet, Virginia, called the Old Trail. The Ark was designed to meet actual measurements of the Biblical ark, measuring 450 feet (137 m) long, 80 feet (24 m) wide and 51 feet (16 m) high. The layout of the Ark was also based on photographs in several children's books that crew members read as children. When the characters were filmed during the day, building an ark or were in place elsewhere, the crew members then built the ark at night. A concrete base was built to support the weight of the large ark; after the shooting was completed, the ark was shot down a week later and the base a week later. When disassembling the set, everything that could be saved from the ark was donated by Habitat for Humanity. Leave no trace was a slogan used by the director as part of the bonus features of the DVD, the Almighty Green set. The costumes and filming locations of The Ark used for filming were located in City, Virginia. To create Evan's beard and long hair, the three designers will take three hours each day, adding separate hair using prosthetic glue and making Carell wear custom wigs. The wigs consisted of both human and yak-hair. With his new look, Carell was sometimes nicknamed Mountain Man, Retrosexual or Unabomber. For his costumes, the designers interviewed textile experts, examined historical information about clothing that was probably worn in Noah's time, and used age fibers for clothing. Scenes for the film were filmed in various locations in Virginia, including areas in and around Waynesboro, Richmond, Charlottesville and Staunton, although some of the shootings did take place at Universal Studios in Hollywood, California. Effects for CGI used throughout the film, Rhythm and Hues (RH) and Industrial Light and Magic (ILM) developed different parts of the film. The RSH focused on animal animation, while ILM completed the final scene of the Ark running through Washington, D.C., by Lindy De quattro, ILM's associate head of visual effects, who testified that this is the first time we've had to take a whole series of pictures that happened in the middle of the day, where you're going to get a very long look at the water and what it's doing. Initially, the company experienced problems with the creation of water effects and had to develop new tools that would choreograph water movements. In addition, ILM used similar tools that were used on their previous film Poseidon. Lighting was also a problem, as the characters on the ark were filmed on the green screen, and the visual effects company had to ensure that the lighting corresponds to the lighting of the characters and the exterior. Details have been added to the ark for long-range shots to make the design of the ark more attractive and to link the size of the ark to the scale compared to the amount of water. To complete the scene, ILM used thirty to sixty crew members and fired 200 rounds during the year between April 2006 and May 2007. A sign on a lamppost in downtown Waynesboro, Virginia, for the filming of Evan Almighty. Rhythm and shadages created 300 pairs of animals for use on the ark and fifteen pairs with higher detail for close-up shots. RH also helped C.I.S. Hollywood, another visual effects company that provided a large number of composites, featuring hundreds of elements of the animal's green screen. In scenes where there are several species of animals, crew members filmed animals on a green screen, and RH and C.I.S. added animals one at a time, sometimes from a few weeks to several months. Andy Arnett, head of animation, said the research was extensive. It took six or seven months to perfect the look of the animals before we first shot at the door. For a scene in Congressman Long's office, CGI was used all the time for the fish that followed Evan from the aquarium. Cafe FX, a visual effects company hired for the scene, ordered ten different species of tropical fish from a local store and studied their movements to simulate them on screen using computer animation. Jeff Goldman, Head of Visual Effects, said: At the beginning of the sequence, we mimicked the actual behavior of the fish in our animation, but as the scene plays out, the fish is to the comedy time of Steve Carell. Marketing At the end of May during the production, the media learned that director Tom Shadyac Shadyac complained to the producers, saying: I don't see any ads, and I don't know why. I'm not getting any answers. People give me information that it's not true ... I hear only about all the other summer movies and nothing about mine. Shadyac also fired his marketing consultants, which he used for previous films because of his thoughts on mishandling marketing. He later apologized for his outburst with the producers, and claimed it was the result of his nervousness before the film was released. Grace Hill Media, a marketing firm that targets religious Americans and was also used to market Bruce Almighty, the Da Vinci Code and the Passion of Christ. In mid-June, 50 U.S. cities hosted exclusive screenings of the film to reach religious moviegoers. Grace Hill provided free blog screenings in exchange for blog ads. The film and its subsequent home video release were sold to Christians and their churches as part of a kindness campaign called Ark ALMIGHTY. The first trailer for the film premiered on March 29, 2007 at The Office, which also starred Steve Carell and Ed Helms. For online advertising, an eight-minute clip of the scene was released on Yahoo! two days before the film's release. Environmental Impact Director Tom Shadyac believes the film reflects the environmental themes of how humans are the stewards of God's creation. According to the themes, Evan Almighty is the first NBC Universal film to offset carbon emissions production. Producer Michael Bosstick talked about how emissions were compensated: We worked closely with the Conservation Foundation to calculate carbon emissions from what we used in the film, whether from used vehicles or some construction equipment. Once our carbon emissions were calculated, we planted trees that would effectively zero out our climate change footprint left out of the film. Shadyac did so by requiring crew members to plant 2,050 trees at the Rappahannock River Valley National Wildlife Refuge in Warsaw, Va., and the San Joaquin River Wildlife Refuge near Modesto, California. He also bought more than 400 bikes for all the actors and crew to get to work instead of driving. In addition, instead of simply tearing down the sets, Shadyac tried to donate houses built for production and a cut-up set of Ark, donating Habitat materials to Humanity. During the film's premiere for actors and film crews at Universal Citywalk, participants were asked to donate to a campaign to plant trees in forests around the world. After the batch used recycled cups and plates to compensate for the use of Shadyac also demanded that when Industrial Light and Magic developed the climate scene, the CGI flood did not seem to harm any of the trees on stage. (12) (12) in partnership with the Get On Board Now website, which focused on the importance of conservation during the production of the film. Donations were made on the website of the Conservation Foundation, which paid for the planting of 15,000 trees. Animal Protection Two Elephants are trained for filming by the American Humane Association, watched 177 species of animals that were used in the film. In scenes including both predators and prey, the animals were added digitally to ensure their safety. The American Humane Association gave permission to show the film's No Animals Were Harmed in the Making of This Film in the final credits. PETA accused the film's producers of using animals that had previously been released. The two chimpanzees who appear in the film, Cooly and Soblie, were surrendered by their owner to settle a lawsuit that documented allegations of beatings and abuse. The film's director, Tom Shadyac, said of PETA's criticism that many of these animals have been rescued from other situations and cannot be returned to the wild and nominees, she lost to Transformers. According to box office, the film is the second highest-grossing film about supernatural comedies with religious elements according to Box Office Mojo, just behind Bruce Almighty. (dead link) Evan Almighty was nominated for worst prequel or sequel, but lost to Daddy Day Camp (quote needed) Box office Although Evan Almighty was well received by veterinary care requirements and failure to provide shelter against heat and sunlight, which PETA details and claims it can document. A Universal Studios spokesperson said: The live animals used in the filming of Evan Almighty have been supplemented by a large number of computer animals, but it would be inappropriate to depend on CGI solely because some key scenes in the film demonstrate the need for peaceful and productive coexistence between humans and animals. One of the film's most famous, inevitable messages is the responsibility that people have to protect and care for animals. The film premiered on June 10, 2007, with Adam Sandler, David Hasselhoff, Kate Flannery, Eddie Murphy, Kevin James and Mindy Kaling among the guests. The home media film was released on HD DVD and DVD on October 9, 2007 and became the fourth DVD of the week, earning $6.4 million in the first six weeks of the film's box office earned $27,676,676 on domestic DVD sales. Special HD-DVD and DVD features include deleted scenes, banknotes, cast interviews and footage of the animals used in the film. The film was released on Blu-ray on August 7, 2012. A proposed ban by Malaysia's Muslim Consumers Association (PPIM) had called for a ban on the film, arguing it is offensive to Islam. Secretary-General Maamor Osman stated that great flood as a comedy and characterized God with the image of a man, both of whom are considered blasphemous in Islam. Similarly there was some public protest against Bruce almighty show in cinemas, but this film was released on DVD and also was shown on television. Evan Almighty was released in Malaysia on August 23, 2007. Receiving a critical response Evan Almighty received generally negative reviews from critics. On Rotten Tomatoes, the film has a 23% approval rating, based on 195 reviews, with an average rating of 4.48/10. Critical consensus of the site reads: Big on special effects, but short laughs, Evan Almighty underdelivers a stellar cast that includes Steve Carell and Morgan Freeman. On Metacritic, the film has a weighted average score of 37 out of 100, based on reviews from 33 critics indicating generally unfavorable reviews. Audiences interviewed by CinemaScore gave the film an A-- rating on a scale from A to F. In his film review, Richard Roper praised Jim Carrey for refusing to reprise his role in the three worst sequels of all time, which included Dumb and Dumber: When Harry Lloyd, Son of Mask and Evan Almighty. He went on: Evan Almighty is a fine piece of supposed comedy with a laugh of drought of biblical proportions, and an indulgently simplistic spiritual message. Several reviewers attribute Carell's work to a significant improvement in the film's humor. Peter Travers of Rolling Stone declared the film the worst epic of the year on his list of worst films of 2007. Before Evan Almighty was released, he was nominated for Best Summer Movie You Haven't Seen at the 2007 MTV Movie Awards. Competing with seven other nominees, she lost to Transformers. According to box office, the film is the second highest-grossing film about supernatural comedies with religious elements according to Box Office Mojo, just behind Bruce Almighty. (dead link) Evan Almighty was nominated for worst prequel or sequel, but lost to Daddy Day Camp (quote needed) Box office Although Evan Almighty was well received by veterinary care requirements and failure to provide shelter against heat and sunlight, which PETA details and claims it can document. A Universal Studios spokesperson said: The live animals used in the filming of Evan Almighty have been supplemented by a large number of computer animals, but it would be inappropriate to depend on CGI solely because some key scenes in the film demonstrate the need for peaceful and productive coexistence between humans and animals. One of the film's most famous, inevitable messages is the responsibility that people have to protect and care for animals. The film premiered on June 10, 2007, with Adam Sandler, David Hasselhoff, Kate Flannery, Eddie Murphy, Kevin James and Mindy Kaling among the guests. The home media film was released on HD DVD and DVD on October 9, 2007 and became the fourth DVD of the week, earning $6.4 million in the first six weeks of the film's box office earned $27,676,676 on domestic DVD sales. Special HD-DVD and DVD features include deleted scenes, banknotes, cast interviews and footage of the animals used in the film. The film was released on Blu-ray on August 7, 2012. A proposed ban by Malaysia's Muslim Consumers Association (PPIM) had called for a ban on the film, arguing it is offensive to Islam. Secretary-General Maamor Osman stated that great flood as a comedy and characterized God with the image of a man, both of whom are considered blasphemous in Islam. Similarly there was some public protest against Bruce almighty show in cinemas, but this film was released on DVD and also was shown on television. Evan Almighty was released in Malaysia on August 23, 2007. Receiving a critical response Evan Almighty received generally negative reviews from critics. On Rotten Tomatoes, the film has a 23% approval rating, based on 195 reviews, with an average rating of 4.48/10. Critical consensus of the site reads: Big on special effects, but short laughs, Evan Almighty underdelivers a stellar cast that includes Steve Carell and Morgan Freeman. On Metacritic, the film has a weighted average score of 37 out of 100, based on reviews from 33 critics indicating generally unfavorable reviews. Audiences interviewed by CinemaScore gave the film an A-- rating on a scale from A to F. In his film review, Richard Roper praised Jim Carrey for refusing to reprise his role in the three worst sequels of all time, which included Dumb and Dumber: When Harry Lloyd, Son of Mask and Evan Almighty. He went on: Evan Almighty is a fine piece of supposed comedy with a laugh of drought of biblical proportions, and an indulgently simplistic spiritual message. Several reviewers attribute Carell's work to a significant improvement in the film's humor. Peter Travers of Rolling Stone declared the film the worst epic of the year on his list of worst films of 2007. Before Evan Almighty was released, he was nominated for Best Summer Movie You Haven't Seen at the 2007 MTV Movie Awards. Competing with seven other nominees, she lost to Transformers. According to box office, the film is the second highest-grossing film about supernatural comedies with religious elements according to Box Office Mojo, just behind Bruce Almighty. (dead link) Evan Almighty was nominated for worst prequel or sequel, but lost to Daddy Day Camp (quote needed) Box office Although Evan Almighty was well received by veterinary care requirements and failure to provide shelter against heat and sunlight, which PETA details and claims it can document. A Universal Studios spokesperson said: The live animals used in the filming of Evan Almighty have been supplemented by a large number of computer animals, but it would be inappropriate to depend on CGI solely because some key scenes in the film demonstrate the need for peaceful and productive coexistence between humans and animals. One of the film's most famous, inevitable messages is the responsibility that people have to protect and care for animals. The film premiered on June 10, 2007, with Adam Sandler, David Hasselhoff, Kate Flannery, Eddie Murphy, Kevin James and Mindy Kaling among the guests. The home media film was released on HD DVD and DVD on October 9, 2007 and became the fourth DVD of the week, earning $6.4 million in the first six weeks of the film's box office earned $27,676,676 on domestic DVD sales. Special HD-DVD and DVD features include deleted scenes, banknotes, cast interviews and footage of the animals used in the film. The film was released on Blu-ray on August 7, 2012. A proposed ban by Malaysia's Muslim Consumers Association (PPIM) had called for a ban on the film, arguing it is offensive to Islam. Secretary-General Maamor Osman stated that great flood as a comedy and characterized God with the image of a man, both of whom are considered blasphemous in Islam. Similarly there was some public protest against Bruce almighty show in cinemas, but this film was released on DVD and also was shown on television. Evan Almighty was released in Malaysia on August 23, 2007. Receiving a critical response Evan Almighty received generally negative reviews from critics. On Rotten Tomatoes, the film has a 23% approval rating, based on 195 reviews, with an average rating of 4.48/10. Critical consensus of the site reads: Big on special effects, but short laughs, Evan Almighty underdelivers a stellar cast that includes Steve Carell and Morgan Freeman. On Metacritic, the film has a weighted average score of 37 out of 100, based on reviews from 33 critics indicating generally unfavorable reviews. Audiences interviewed by CinemaScore gave the film an A-- rating on a scale from A to F. In his film review, Richard Roper praised Jim Carrey for refusing to reprise his role in the three worst sequels of all time, which included Dumb and Dumber: When Harry Lloyd, Son of Mask and Evan Almighty. He went on: Evan Almighty is a fine piece of supposed comedy with a laugh of drought of biblical proportions, and an indulgently simplistic spiritual message. Several reviewers attribute Carell's work to a significant improvement in the film's humor. Peter Travers of Rolling Stone declared the film the worst epic of the year on his list of worst films of 2007. Before Evan Almighty was released, he was nominated for Best Summer Movie You Haven't Seen at the 2007 MTV Movie Awards. Competing with seven other nominees, she lost to Transformers. According to box office, the film is the second highest-grossing film about supernatural comedies with religious elements according to Box Office Mojo, just behind Bruce Almighty. (dead link) Evan Almighty was nominated for worst prequel or sequel, but lost to Daddy Day Camp (quote needed) Box office Although Evan Almighty was well received by veterinary care requirements and failure to provide shelter against heat and sunlight, which PETA details and claims it can document. A Universal Studios spokesperson said: The live animals used in the filming of Evan Almighty have been supplemented by a large number of computer animals, but it would be inappropriate to depend on CGI solely because some key scenes in the film demonstrate the need for peaceful and productive coexistence between humans and animals. One of the film's most famous, inevitable messages is the responsibility that people have to protect and care for animals. The film premiered on June 10, 2007, with Adam Sandler, David Hasselhoff, Kate Flannery, Eddie Murphy, Kevin James and Mindy Kaling among the guests. The home media film was released on HD DVD and DVD on October 9, 2007 and became the fourth DVD of the week, earning $6.4 million in the first six weeks of the film's box office earned $27,676,676 on domestic DVD sales. Special HD-DVD and DVD features include deleted scenes, banknotes, cast interviews and footage of the animals used in the film. The film was released on Blu-ray on August 7, 2012. A proposed ban by Malaysia's Muslim Consumers Association (PPIM) had called for a ban on the film, arguing it is offensive to Islam. Secretary-General Maamor Osman stated that great flood as a comedy and characterized God with the image of a man, both of whom are considered blasphemous in Islam. Similarly there was some public protest against Bruce almighty show in cinemas, but this film was released on DVD and also was shown on television. Evan Almighty was released in Malaysia on August 23, 2007. Receiving a critical response Evan Almighty received generally negative reviews from critics. On Rotten Tomatoes, the film has a 23% approval rating, based on 195 reviews, with an average rating of 4.48/10. Critical consensus of the site reads: Big on special effects, but short laughs, Evan Almighty underdelivers a stellar cast that includes Steve Carell and Morgan Freeman. On Metacritic, the film has a weighted average score of 37 out of 100, based on reviews from 33 critics indicating generally unfavorable reviews. Audiences interviewed by CinemaScore gave the film an A-- rating on a scale from A to F. In his film review, Richard Roper praised Jim Carrey for refusing to reprise his role in the three worst sequels of all time, which included Dumb and Dumber: When Harry Lloyd, Son of Mask and Evan Almighty. He went on: Evan Almighty is a fine piece of supposed comedy with a laugh of drought of biblical proportions, and an indulgently simplistic spiritual message. Several reviewers attribute Carell's work to a significant improvement in the film's humor. Peter Travers of Rolling Stone declared the film the worst epic of the year on his list of worst films of 2007. Before Evan Almighty was released, he was nominated for Best Summer Movie You Haven't Seen at the 2007 MTV Movie Awards. Competing with seven other nominees, she lost to Transformers. According to box office, the film is the second highest-grossing film about supernatural comedies with religious elements according to Box Office Mojo, just behind Bruce Almighty. (dead link) Evan Almighty was nominated for worst prequel or sequel, but lost to Daddy Day Camp (quote needed) Box office Although Evan Almighty was well received by veterinary care requirements and failure to provide shelter against heat and sunlight, which PETA details and claims it can document. A Universal Studios spokesperson said: The live animals used in the filming of Evan Almighty have been supplemented by a large number of computer animals, but it would be inappropriate to depend on CGI solely because some key scenes in the film demonstrate the need for peaceful and productive coexistence between humans and animals. One of the film's most famous, inevitable messages is the responsibility that people have to protect and care for animals. The film premiered on June 10, 2007, with Adam Sandler, David Hasselhoff, Kate Flannery, Eddie Murphy, Kevin James and Mindy Kaling among the guests. The home media film was released on HD DVD and DVD on October 9, 2007 and became the fourth DVD of the week, earning $6.4 million in the first six weeks of the film's box office earned $27,676,676 on domestic DVD sales. Special HD-DVD and DVD features include deleted scenes, banknotes, cast interviews and footage of the animals used in the film. The film was released on Blu-ray on August 7, 2012. A proposed ban by Malaysia's Muslim Consumers Association (PPIM) had called for a ban on the film, arguing it is offensive to Islam. Secretary-General Maamor Osman stated that great flood as a comedy and characterized God with the image of a man, both of whom are considered blasphemous in Islam. Similarly there was some public protest against Bruce almighty show in cinemas, but this film was released on DVD and also was shown on television. Evan Almighty was released in Malaysia on August 23, 2007. Receiving a critical response Evan Almighty received generally negative reviews from critics. On Rotten Tomatoes, the film has a 23% approval rating, based on 195 reviews, with an average rating of 4.48/10. Critical consensus of the site reads: Big on special effects, but short laughs, Evan Almighty underdelivers a stellar cast that includes Steve Carell and Morgan Freeman. On Metacritic, the film has a weighted average score of 37 out of 100, based on reviews from 33 critics indicating generally unfavorable reviews. Audiences interviewed by CinemaScore gave the film an A-- rating on a scale from A to F. In his film review, Richard Roper praised Jim Carrey for refusing to reprise his role in the three worst sequels of all time, which included Dumb and Dumber: When Harry Lloyd, Son of Mask and Evan Almighty. He went on: Evan Almighty is a fine piece of supposed comedy with a laugh of drought of biblical proportions, and an indulgently simplistic spiritual message. Several reviewers attribute Carell's work to a significant improvement in the film's humor. Peter Travers of Rolling Stone declared the film the worst epic of the year on his list of worst films of 2007. Before Evan Almighty was released, he was nominated for Best Summer Movie You Haven't Seen at the 2007 MTV Movie Awards. Competing with seven other nominees, she lost to Transformers. According to box office, the film is the second highest-grossing film about supernatural comedies with religious elements according to Box Office Mojo, just behind Bruce Almighty. (dead link) Evan Almighty was nominated for worst prequel or sequel, but lost to Daddy Day Camp (quote needed) Box office Although Evan Almighty was well received by veterinary care requirements and failure to provide shelter against heat and sunlight, which PETA details and claims it can document. A Universal Studios spokesperson said: The live animals used in the filming of Evan Almighty have been supplemented by a large number of computer animals, but it would be inappropriate to depend on CGI solely because some key scenes in the film demonstrate the need for peaceful and productive coexistence between humans and animals. One of the film's most famous, inevitable messages is the responsibility that people have to protect and care for animals. The film premiered on June 10, 2007, with Adam Sandler, David Hasselhoff, Kate Flannery, Eddie Murphy, Kevin James and Mindy Kaling among the guests. The home media film was released on HD DVD and DVD on October 9, 2007 and became the fourth DVD of the week, earning $6.4 million in the first six weeks of the film's box office earned $27,676,676 on domestic DVD sales. Special HD-DVD and DVD features include deleted scenes, banknotes, cast interviews and footage of the animals used in the film. The film was released on Blu-ray on August 7, 2012. A proposed ban by Malaysia's Muslim Consumers Association (PPIM) had called for a ban on the film, arguing it is offensive to Islam. Secretary-General Maamor Osman stated that great flood as a comedy and characterized God with the image of a man, both of whom are considered blasphemous in Islam. Similarly there was some public protest against Bruce almighty show in cinemas, but this film was released on DVD and also was shown on television. Evan Almighty was released in Malaysia on August 23, 2007. Receiving a critical response Evan Almighty received generally negative reviews from critics. On Rotten Tomatoes, the film has a 23% approval rating, based on 195 reviews, with an average rating of 4.48/10. Critical consensus of the site reads: Big on special effects, but short laughs, Evan Almighty underdelivers a stellar cast that includes Steve Carell and Morgan Freeman. On Metacritic, the film has a weighted average score of 37 out of 100, based on reviews from 33 critics indicating generally unfavorable reviews. Audiences interviewed by CinemaScore gave the film an A-- rating on a scale from A to F. In his film review, Richard Roper praised Jim Carrey for refusing to reprise his role in the three worst sequels of all time, which included Dumb and Dumber: When Harry Lloyd, Son of Mask and Evan Almighty. He went on: Evan Almighty is a fine piece of supposed comedy with a laugh of drought of biblical proportions, and an indulgently simplistic spiritual message. Several reviewers attribute Carell's work to a significant improvement in the film's humor. Peter Travers of Rolling Stone declared the film the worst epic of the year on his list of worst films of 2007. Before Evan Almighty was released, he was nominated for Best Summer Movie You Haven't Seen at the 2007 MTV Movie Awards. Competing with seven other nominees, she lost to Transformers. According to box office, the film is the second highest-grossing film about supernatural comedies with religious elements according to Box Office Mojo, just behind Bruce Almighty. (dead link) Evan Almighty was nominated for worst prequel or sequel, but lost to Daddy Day Camp (quote needed) Box office Although Evan Almighty was well received by veterinary care requirements and failure to provide shelter against heat and sunlight, which PETA details and claims it can document. A Universal Studios spokesperson said: The live animals used in the filming of Evan Almighty have been supplemented by a large number of computer animals, but it would be inappropriate to depend on CGI solely because some key scenes in the film demonstrate the need for peaceful and productive coexistence between humans and animals. One of the film's most famous, inevitable messages is the responsibility that people have to protect and care for animals. The film premiered on June 10, 2007, with Adam Sandler, David Hasselhoff, Kate Flannery, Eddie Murphy, Kevin James and Mindy Kaling among the guests. The home media film was released on HD DVD and DVD on October 9, 2007 and became the fourth DVD of the week, earning $6.4 million in the first six weeks of the film's box office earned $27,676,676 on domestic DVD sales. Special HD-DVD and DVD features include deleted scenes, banknotes, cast interviews and footage of the animals used in the film. The film was released on Blu-ray on August 7, 2012. A proposed ban by Malaysia's Muslim Consumers Association (PPIM) had called for a ban on the film, arguing it is offensive to Islam. Secretary-General Maamor Osman stated that great flood as a comedy and characterized God with the image of a man, both of whom are considered blasphemous in Islam. Similarly there was some public protest against Bruce almighty show in cinemas, but this film was released on DVD and also was shown on television. Evan Almighty was released in Malaysia on August 23, 2007. Receiving a critical response Evan Almighty received generally negative reviews from critics. On Rotten Tomatoes, the film has a 23% approval rating, based on 195 reviews, with an average rating of 4.48/10. Critical consensus of the site reads: Big on special effects, but short laughs, Evan Almighty underdelivers a stellar cast that includes Steve Carell and Morgan Freeman. On Metacritic, the film has a weighted average score of 37 out of 100, based on reviews from 33 critics indicating generally unfavorable reviews. Audiences interviewed by CinemaScore gave the film an A-- rating on a scale from A to F. In his film review, Richard Roper praised Jim Carrey for refusing to reprise his role in the three worst sequels of all time, which included Dumb and Dumber: When Harry Lloyd, Son of Mask and Evan Almighty. He went on: Evan Almighty is a fine piece of supposed comedy with a laugh of drought of biblical proportions, and an indulgently simplistic spiritual message. Several reviewers attribute Carell's work to a significant improvement in the film's humor. Peter Travers of Rolling Stone declared the film the worst epic of the year on his list of worst films of 2007. Before Evan Almighty was released, he was nominated for Best Summer Movie You Haven't Seen at the 2007 MTV Movie Awards. Competing with seven other nominees, she lost to Transformers. According to box office, the film is the second highest-grossing film about supernatural comedies with religious elements according to Box Office Mojo, just behind Bruce Almighty. (dead link) Evan Almighty was nominated for worst prequel or sequel, but lost to Daddy Day Camp (quote needed) Box office Although Evan Almighty was well received by veterinary care requirements and failure to provide shelter against heat and sunlight, which PETA details and claims it can document. A Universal Studios spokesperson said: The live animals used in the filming of Evan Almighty have been supplemented by a large number of computer animals, but it would be inappropriate to depend on CGI solely because some key scenes in the film demonstrate the need for peaceful and productive coexistence between humans and animals. One of the film's most famous, inevitable messages is the responsibility that people have to protect and care for animals. The film premiered on June 10, 2007, with Adam Sandler, David Hasselhoff, Kate Flannery, Eddie Murphy, Kevin James and Mindy Kaling among the guests. The home media film was released on HD DVD and DVD on October 9, 2007 and became the fourth DVD of the week, earning $6.4 million in the first six weeks of the film's box office earned $27,676,676 on domestic DVD sales. Special HD-DVD and DVD features include deleted scenes, banknotes, cast interviews and footage of the animals used in the film. The film was released on Blu-ray on August 7, 2012. A proposed ban by Malaysia's Muslim Consumers Association (PPIM) had called for a ban on the film, arguing it is offensive to Islam. Secretary-General Maamor Osman stated that great flood as a comedy and characterized God with the image of a man, both of whom are considered blasphemous in Islam. Similarly there was some public protest against Bruce almighty show in cinemas, but this film was released on DVD and also was shown on television. Evan Almighty was released in Malaysia on August 23, 2007. Receiving a critical response Evan Almighty received generally negative reviews from critics. On Rotten Tomatoes, the film has a 23% approval rating, based on 195 reviews, with an average rating of 4.48/10. Critical consensus of the site reads: Big on special effects, but short laughs, Evan Almighty underdelivers a stellar cast that includes Steve Carell and Morgan Freeman. On Metacritic, the film has a weighted average score of 37 out of 100, based on reviews from 33 critics indicating generally unfavorable reviews. Audiences interviewed by CinemaScore gave the film an A-- rating on a scale from A to F. In his film review, Richard Roper praised Jim Carrey for refusing to reprise his role in the three worst sequels of all time, which included Dumb and Dumber: When Harry Lloyd, Son of Mask and Evan Almighty. He went on: Evan Almighty is a fine piece of supposed comedy with a laugh of drought of biblical proportions, and an indulgently simplistic spiritual message. Several reviewers attribute Carell's work to a significant improvement in the film's humor. Peter Travers of Rolling Stone declared the film the worst epic of the year on his list of worst films of 2007. Before Evan Almighty was released, he was nominated for Best Summer Movie You Haven't Seen at the 2007 MTV Movie Awards. Competing with seven other nominees, she lost to Transformers. According to box office, the film is the second highest-grossing film about supernatural comedies with religious elements according to Box Office Mojo, just behind Bruce Almighty. (dead link) Evan Almighty was nominated for worst prequel or sequel, but lost to Daddy Day Camp (quote needed) Box office Although Evan Almighty was well received by veterinary care requirements and failure to provide shelter against heat and sunlight, which PETA details and claims it can document. A Universal Studios spokesperson said: The live animals used in the filming of Evan Almighty have been supplemented by a large number of computer animals, but it would be inappropriate to depend on CGI solely because some key scenes in the film demonstrate the need for peaceful and productive coexistence between humans and animals. One of the film's most famous, inevitable messages is the responsibility that people have to protect and care for animals. The film premiered on June 10, 2007, with Adam Sandler, David Hasselhoff, Kate Flannery, Eddie Murphy, Kevin James and Mindy Kaling among the guests. The home media film was released on HD DVD and DVD on October 9, 2007 and became the fourth DVD of the week, earning $6.4 million in the first six weeks of the film's box office earned $27,676,676 on domestic DVD sales. Special HD-DVD and DVD features include deleted scenes, banknotes, cast interviews and footage of the animals used in the film. The film was released on Blu-ray on August 7, 2012. A proposed ban by Malaysia's Muslim Consumers Association (PPIM) had called for a ban on the film, arguing it is offensive to Islam. Secretary-General Maamor Osman stated that great flood as a comedy and characterized God with the image of a man, both of whom are considered blasphemous in Islam. Similarly there was some public protest against Bruce almighty show in cinemas, but this film was released on DVD and also was shown on television. Evan Almighty was released in Malaysia on August 23, 2007. Receiving a critical response Evan Almighty received generally negative reviews from critics. On Rotten Tomatoes, the film has a 23% approval rating, based on 195 reviews, with an average rating of 4.48/10. Critical consensus of the site reads: Big on special effects, but short laughs, Evan Almighty underdelivers a stellar cast that includes Steve Carell and Morgan Freeman. On Metacritic, the film has a weighted average score of 37 out of 100, based on reviews from 33 critics indicating generally unfavorable reviews. Audiences interviewed by CinemaScore gave the film an A-- rating on a scale from A to F. In his film review, Richard Roper praised Jim Carrey for refusing to reprise his role in the three worst sequels of all time, which included Dumb and Dumber: When Harry Lloyd, Son of Mask and Evan Almighty. He went on: Evan Almighty is a fine piece of supposed comedy with a laugh of drought of biblical proportions, and an indulgently simplistic spiritual message. Several reviewers attribute Carell's work to a significant improvement in the film's humor. Peter Travers of Rolling Stone declared the film the worst epic of the year on his list of worst films of 2007. Before Evan Almighty was released, he was nominated for Best Summer Movie You Haven't Seen at the 2007 MTV Movie Awards. Competing with seven other nominees, she lost to Transformers. According to box office, the film is the second highest-grossing film about supernatural comedies with religious elements according to Box Office Mojo, just behind Bruce Almighty. (dead link) Evan Almighty was nominated for worst prequel or sequel, but lost to Daddy Day Camp (quote needed) Box office Although Evan Almighty was well received by veterinary care requirements and failure to provide shelter against heat and sunlight, which PETA details and claims it can document. A Universal Studios spokesperson said: The live animals used in the filming of Evan Almighty have been supplemented by a large number of computer animals, but it would be inappropriate to depend on CGI solely because some key scenes in the film demonstrate the need for peaceful and productive coexistence between humans and animals. One of the film's most famous, inevitable messages is the responsibility that people have to protect and care for animals. The film premiered on June 10, 2007, with Adam Sandler, David Hasselhoff, Kate Flannery, Eddie Murphy, Kevin James and Mindy Kaling among the guests. The home media film was released on HD DVD and DVD on October 9, 2007 and became the fourth DVD of the week, earning $6.4 million in the first six weeks of the film's box office earned $27,676,676 on domestic DVD sales. Special HD-DVD and DVD features include deleted scenes, banknotes, cast interviews and footage of the animals used in the film. The film was released on Blu-ray on August 7, 2012. A proposed ban by Malaysia's Muslim Consumers Association (PPIM) had called for a ban on the film, arguing it is offensive to Islam. Secretary-General Maamor Osman stated that great flood as a comedy and characterized God with the image of a man, both of whom are considered blasphemous in Islam. Similarly there was some public protest against Bruce almighty show in cinemas, but this film was released on DVD and also was shown on television. Evan Almighty was released in Malaysia on August 23, 2007. Receiving a critical response Evan Almighty received generally negative reviews from critics. On Rotten Tomatoes, the film has a 23% approval rating, based on 195 reviews, with an average rating of 4.48/10. Critical consensus of the site reads: Big on special effects, but short laughs, Evan Almighty underdelivers a stellar cast that includes Steve Carell and Morgan Freeman. On Metacritic, the film has a weighted average score of 37 out of 100, based on reviews from 33 critics indicating generally unfavorable reviews. Audiences interviewed by CinemaScore gave the film an A-- rating on a scale from A to F. In his film review, Richard Roper praised Jim Carrey for refusing to reprise his role in the three worst sequels of all time, which included Dumb and Dumber: When Harry Lloyd, Son of Mask and Evan Almighty. He went on: Evan Almighty is a fine piece of supposed comedy with a laugh of drought of biblical proportions, and an indulgently simplistic spiritual message. Several reviewers attribute Carell's work to a significant improvement in the film's humor. Peter Travers of Rolling Stone declared the film the worst epic of the year on his list of worst films of 2007. Before Evan Almighty was released, he was nominated for Best Summer Movie You Haven't Seen at the 2007 MTV Movie Awards. Competing with seven other nominees, she lost to Transformers. According to box office, the film is the second highest-grossing film about supernatural comedies with religious elements according to Box Office Mojo, just behind Bruce Almighty. (dead link) Evan Almighty was nominated for worst prequel or sequel, but lost to Daddy Day Camp (quote needed) Box office Although Evan Almighty was well received by veterinary care requirements and failure to provide shelter against heat and sunlight, which PETA details and claims it can document. A Universal Studios spokesperson said: The live animals used in the filming of Evan Almighty have been supplemented by a large number of computer animals, but it would be inappropriate to depend on CGI solely because some key scenes in the film demonstrate the need for peaceful and productive coexistence between humans and animals. One of the film's most famous, inevitable messages is the responsibility that people have to protect and care for animals. The film premiered on June 10, 2007, with Adam Sandler, David Hasselhoff, Kate Flannery, Eddie Murphy, Kevin James and Mindy Kaling among the guests. The home media film was released on HD DVD and DVD on October 9, 2007 and became the fourth DVD of the week, earning $6.4 million in the first six weeks of the film's box office earned $27,676,676 on domestic DVD sales. Special HD-DVD and DVD features include deleted scenes, banknotes, cast interviews and footage of the animals used in the film. The film was released on Blu-ray on August 7, 2012. A proposed ban by Malaysia's Muslim Consumers Association (PPIM) had called for a ban on the film, arguing it is offensive to Islam. Secretary-General Maamor Osman stated that great flood as a comedy and characterized God with the image of a man, both of whom are considered blasphemous in Islam. Similarly there was some public protest against Bruce almighty show in cinemas, but this film was released on DVD and also was shown on television. Evan Almighty was released in Malaysia on August 23, 2007. Receiving a critical response Evan Almighty received generally negative reviews from critics. On Rotten Tomatoes, the film has a 23% approval rating, based on 195 reviews, with an average rating of 4.48/10. Critical consensus of the site reads: Big on special effects, but short laughs, Evan Almighty underdelivers a stellar cast that includes Steve Carell and Morgan Freeman. On Metacritic, the film has a weighted average score of 37 out of 100, based on reviews from 33 critics indicating generally unfavorable reviews. Audiences interviewed by CinemaScore gave the film an A-- rating on a scale from A to F. In his film review, Richard Roper praised Jim Carrey for refusing to reprise his role in the three worst sequels of all time, which included Dumb and Dumber: When Harry Lloyd, Son of Mask and Evan Almighty. He went on: Evan Almighty is a fine piece of supposed comedy with a laugh of drought of biblical proportions, and an indulgently simplistic spiritual message. Several reviewers attribute Carell's work to a significant improvement in the film's humor. Peter Travers of Rolling Stone declared the film the worst epic of the year on his list of worst films of 2007. Before Evan Almighty was released, he was nominated for Best Summer Movie You Haven't Seen at the 2007 MTV Movie Awards. Competing with seven other nominees, she lost to Transformers. According to box office, the film is the second highest-grossing film about supernatural comedies with religious elements according to Box Office Mojo, just behind Bruce Almighty. (dead link) Evan Almighty was nominated for worst prequel or sequel, but lost to Daddy Day Camp (quote needed) Box office Although Evan Almighty was well received by veterinary care requirements and failure to provide shelter against heat and sunlight, which PETA details and claims it can document. A Universal Studios spokesperson said: The live animals used in the filming of Evan Almighty have been supplemented by a large number of computer animals, but it would be inappropriate to depend on CGI solely because some key scenes in the film demonstrate the need for peaceful and productive coexistence between humans and animals. One of the film's most famous, inevitable messages is the responsibility that people have to protect and care for animals. The film premiered on June 10, 2007, with Adam Sandler, David Hasselhoff, Kate Flannery, Eddie Murphy, Kevin James and Mindy Kaling among the guests. The home media film was released on HD DVD and DVD on October 9, 2007 and became the fourth DVD of the week, earning $6.4 million in the first six weeks of the film's box office earned $27,676,676 on domestic DVD sales. Special HD-DVD and DVD features include deleted scenes, banknotes, cast interviews and footage of the animals used in the film. The film was released on Blu-ray on August 7, 2012. A proposed ban by Malaysia's Muslim Consumers Association (PPIM) had called for a ban on the film, arguing it is offensive to Islam. Secretary-General Maamor Osman stated that great flood as a comedy and characterized God with the image of a man, both of whom are considered blasphemous in Islam. Similarly there was some public protest against Bruce almighty show in cinemas, but this film was released on DVD and also was shown on television. Evan Almighty was released in Malaysia on August 23, 2007. Receiving a critical response Evan Almighty received generally negative reviews from critics. On Rotten Tomatoes, the film has a 23% approval rating, based on 195 reviews, with an average rating of 4.48/10. Critical consensus of the site reads: Big on special effects, but short laughs, Evan Almighty underdelivers a stellar cast that