.zip What is the solution? I had the same issue, I found out that if you manually go to the display card file, and do the following command, it will fix the issue: C:\Windows\System32\gdi32.dll,flushcache I understand the reason why this happens, but I want to know how to fix this issue. A: I finally got it to work by making the following change to my system: In the Start Menu -> Programs -> Microsoft Windows (x86) Settings There should be an Advanced tab, click the Advanced Tab Under the "Error Reporting" settings, I had to change the "Automatically send error reports to Microsoft" to "Manually send error reports to Microsoft." After that, I was able to run the program and view the objects in 3DS Max. Please Note: DZP uses an "Apply as a Guest" method of asking for donations that is different from the way most other websites work. If you go to most other websites to make a donation they will take you to a page that looks like this: which requires you to create an account and/or log into your account if you already have one. It also makes you register as a "donor" with those sites, but that's optional. They then ask you to enter your credit card and billing information, but as far as we know they don't actually bill you. The second method that DZP uses is that you simply click on the "DONATE" button (which is different from the donation button on the home page). This option is available to everyone, and you can also just use this method without registering, but the donation total that you see will not be exactly the same as the one shown in the "Apply as a Guest" method. If you use the "Apply as a Guest" method of asking for donations you do not need to register or login to any websites. Note: The email address you provide will only be used for those donations, not for other purposes, and it will never be shared or sold. If you have a friend who would like to donate you can send him or her the URL for the donation page, or if you want you can send them the email address you provided. If you want to send your friend a PayPal email address you can find it 520fdb1ae7
