

Linda Wilder-Bryan District 3 Alderwoman

Alderwoman Linda Wilder-Bryan is a lifelong Savannah resident, dedicated public servant, community advocate, and proud mother of Logan, Lindsay, and the late Lawrence Bryan IV. She is also the grandmother of Lawrence V, Liam, and Lawson. Elected in 2019 as alderwoman for Savannah's Third District, she made history as the first woman to serve in the role. Her leadership centers on strengthening neighborhoods, advancing equity, promoting public safety, expanding affordable housing and economic opportunity, and empowering residents through collaboration and community engagement.

A graduate of Morris Brown College, where she studied political science, criminal justice, and English, Wilder-Bryan also pursued graduate studies through Atlanta University's Master of Public Administration program. Before entering elected office, she served as a sergeant with the Chatham County Sheriff's Office and as an Environmental Health and Safety Manager at Interfor U.S. Inc., formerly associated with International Paper. She also served as Co-Chair of the Chatham County Joint Democratic Party.

After the tragic loss of her son, Lawrence Bryan IV, to gun violence in 2015, Wilder-Bryan transformed her grief into action by founding the LB4 & After Foundation. The organization supports families affected by gun violence and promotes healing, mentorship, and prevention. She also partners with Mothers of Murdered Sons, Moms Demand Action, and RUFF to amplify the voices of affected families and advance violence-prevention efforts. Her community service includes involvement with Omar Court No. 91, Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, Incorporated, and National Women Educators.

Through initiatives such as the Women of Action Royal celebration and the Innovate With Us community forum, Wilder-Bryan brings residents together to recognize local leadership and address environmental and economic challenges. Guided by her belief that "crime and poverty are married to each other," she remains committed to addressing the root causes of violence through education, opportunity, accountability, and strong community partnerships. Her leadership reflects resilience, compassion, and an unwavering commitment to helping Savannah's residents and families find healing, strength, and hope.
