story on the real Alexander Bulles, who spent more than four years on the Pacific Island known as Tierra, and who changed his name in 1695 to Robinson Crusoe Island. Shattered. 4 All for more with Daniel Defoe, see the Life Index and the strange amusing adventures of Robinson Crusoe I go to sea, I began from a good family in York, where my father, a merchant, settled after having gone out of business. My father gave me a component share of the trading and designed me for the sea. 5 I was successful in my voyage, and I had some of my money in pocket. I solicited, and there I met with the winner of the ship, who was trading on the coast of Guinea. This capricious, taking the fancy to my conversation, told me I should have tried to make the journey with him, I supposed I could do some savory on my own account, but I went on with an escort and went on a journey with him. With some of my men, I passed the 40th parallel, which I could to go to Spain, and then I arrived on the coast of Guinea, which was a pleasing journey. This made me both a sailor and a merchant, because I saw many abuses gave me almost 500 pounds, my return to

London, and I fled with these building thoughts that he had no money. Now I was established as a Guinea trader, and desired go on the same voyage again in the same ship, but it was the most enjoyable trip ever made by me because we were off the African coast we supposed to be going to the Gold Coast. The ship was taken on the 10th of July, 1689, it was a fine ship, and was bound for England. I was anxious to see my home, and
