The world famous left-wing journalist, Tim Pool, posted this video about President Obama giving instructions to the Chief of Staff, or whoever the hell is the actual president, or maybe some secret organization or something: I think I know what's going on here. (The following video was removed by Youtube. I cannot reproduce it here because Youtube thinks I am some kind of hacking criminal, but it can be viewed at the link below.) Obama might not have had a Twitter account, or Twitter accounts, or maybe he had multiple Twitter accounts. At any rate, whoever it was that gave the President the directions, I'm sure they were pretty clear: "You want this twitter account to disappear? Just say it is, and it will be. Say it is, and it will be." In my opinion, we should all be afraid that this is how we will all be treated. Maybe you are not that interested in Twitter, or you do not use it, or you did not know that it is an organization that exists, but I think you should be aware of this. It is one thing if they do not remove it, but if they do, and the President gives them orders to do so, they will follow those orders. You could be next. The New Jersey Governor, Chris Christie, has set up a Twitter account on his official website. I think he had heard that some people would try to get him on Twitter, or else he would just try to make things easier. It is possible that some day he might be wanting to send a message, and he would be able to do so. It is possible that he will use it to post pictures of his family and other events. Most of you probably think that this is a good thing. Many people like to share their opinions, and they like to talk about what is going on in the world. They like to follow various organizations that are doing things. For them, it makes sense to be able to do so, because that is how they learn about news. If they do not have the opportunity to share their thoughts 520fdb1ae7
