Robert S. Feldman is a professor of psychology and dean of the College of Social and Behavioral Sciences at the University of Massachusetts Amherst. The recipient of the Teacher Award, which he received, teaches psychology classes in sizes of 15 to nearly 500 students. In more than two decades as a university instructor, he has studied both undergraduate and postgraduate courses at Mount Holyoke University, Wesleyan University, Virginia Commonwealth University, in addition to the University of Massachusetts. Feldman, who started a minority mentoring program at the University of Massachusetts, also served as a Hewlett teaching colleague and senior online teacher. He began teaching remotely at the University of Massachusetts. Feldman is also actively involved in promoting the field of psychology. On the board of directors of the Association of Behavioral and Brain Sciences (FABBS), she is on the board of the FABBS Foundation Associate of the American Psychological Association and the Psychological Science Association, and Professor Feldman received B.A. high honors from Wesleyan University and M.S. and Ph.D. at the University of Wisconsin-Madison. Feldman is a Fulbright Senior Research Scholar and Lecturer and has written more than 150 books, books and scientific papers. He edited the development of non-verbal behaviour in children (Springer-Verlag), applications of nonverbal behavioural theory and research (Erlbaum) and co-edited Basics of Nonverbal Behavior (Cambridge University Press). He is also the author of Children's Development, Understanding Psychology and P.O.W.E.R. Learning: Strategies for Success in College and Life. His books have been translated into a number of languages, including Spanish, French, Portuguese, Dutch, Chinese and Japanese. His research interests include sincerity and deception in everyday life and the use of nonverbal behaviour in impression management, and his research has been supported by grants from the National Institute of Mental Health and the National Institute of Disability and Rehabilitation Research. Feldman loves music, is an avid, if not exactly expert, pianist, and enjoys cooking and traveling. He has three children, and he and his wife, a psychologist, live in western Massachusetts, in a home overlooking the Holyoke Mountains. REVEL for Lifespan Discovery, The Third Edition gives students a thorough sense of the whole development process and how domain development works together. Author Robert S. Feldman's attractive and accessible writing style makes the material meaningful for students, and prepares them to use the content for their personal and future professional lives.
