The CX 3 2020 is equipped with several electrical components that are switched on and powered by electricity. The power source of our cars, that is, the battery not only serves as the engine ignition generation, but also nourishes other components such as headlights, dashboard, windshield wiper, among others. CX 3 2020 Fuse Box Each of these elements is powered by the electrical source of our car, however, electricity is not always reliable at all, it has never happened to you that you have an electric device and it burns and a sudden increase in light, and in the car can happen the same thing. CX 3 with metal elements can control electricity and the transfer of energy intensity, which are overloaded on electrical elements. This overload can damage it, and make our pocket hurt. The fuse box prevents such events, as they serve as a bridge between the electricity team and the electrical element, feeling a high current that exceeds its tolerance, it burns and becomes useless, which disrupts the electric bridge and therefore the passage of energy. In the Owner's Guide you can see this information on how many and what types of fuses the Mazda CX 3 2020 has, as well as what electrical systems it protects. Where's the fuse box? Most cars have two fuse boxes: one located to the left under and the other in the engine compartment on the right side. The inner fuse box is located at the height of the driver's knee, under the steering wheel on the left side. Where FUSES CX 3 2020 are access to the inner fuse box is somewhat tricky and even more so when you need to replace the damaged fuse or look for a malfunction in this box, since you have to get upside down or lie back on the floor next to the pedals and kicks outside the car to glue your head so you can work. The inner lid of the fuse requires pressure, which must be applied to plastic dwellings to remove and open it. CX 3 2020 User Guide Under the Hood: To access this box, just open the hood and it is readily available, on the one hand, the safety is pressed and the lid removed to access the fuses and relay hood. Instead, the engine fuse box is next to the battery, which is located to the right of the hood compartment. Each box has an appropriate cover, which was marked with the names of electrical circuits that protect these fuses, as well as their empire and location inside each box. Classification CX 3 2020 fuses In this user guide for ALTIMA 2020 you will find a classification of fuses that is very friendly when identifying them, since they have a color identification system, yes, how does it read by color, that is, if the color fuse yellow or red will have different tolerances? The answer is yes, depending on the color there will be different electrical tolerances, then we will name them. CX 3 2020 Red Fuse Types: 10 amps tolerance. Blue: Tolerance 15 amps. Yellow: Tolerance 20 amps. Green: Tolerance 30 amps. Orange: Tolerance 40 amps. Additional note: The Orange Fuse 40A is a common fuse of the car's electrical circuits, and being damaged leaves the entire car circuit without power. For high-current fuses, 40A, for example, pink is used and the shape of the fuse changes to a square section instead of flat and elongated, as in the case of orange fuse 40A. Fuse 40A is not the only pink fuse, as the current 50A and 60A use the same pink color.
