Use the included illustrations or make your own to make your 3D card completely personalized and perfect for giving! What you need to make a 3D card....all you need for these 3D pop-up paper cards and something to add color to! This makes these 3D maps an inexpensive and easy project for children of all ages! You can use any kind of paper-copy paper weight, printed or colored paper scraps etc. Cardstock folds clear and heavy enough to keep pop-ups nicely! You will also need to collect scissors, glue stick, and something color with. Pencils, markers, or colored pencils will all work well! That's it - easy! Building a 3D pop-up map... The basic idea here is that you will create two cards, one slightly smaller than the other. The picture above shows the standard 8.5 x 11 piece of colored cardboard cut in half. The white paper inside is slightly smaller than the outer layer and contains actual pop-up or three-dimensional card elements! Fold the shares of the white card in half. Starting at the fold cut three sets of incisions that extend about two inches into the body of the card. Don't turn off these tabs. This is the part of the card that will sleep away from the map and POP! The size of these tabs is completely optional. You can have as many tabs as you want and change their size every time! Free printed pop-up card template.... While you can make pop up cards of any shape or any size I've provided you with a super easy pop-up map template here. I like the idea of starting with this printed template to give your kiddos an easy way of understanding how to make a pop-up card. Once they have a basic idea, they can get a little creative about creating different sizes and shapes. The pattern you see below is the perfect measurement to use with half a piece of 8.5 x 11 piece of cardboard for an external card. This will allow that good colored edge around the map. Once you've popped tabs out of using glue stick to apply glue everywhere but tabs. Glue the inner piece of the pop-up card onto the colorful exterior, allowing the tabs to pop out and fold up when the card folds up. Now the technical part of your map is done and it's time to add some personality. You can literally add something to these tabs to make your card perfect for any occasion. The only thing you want to keep in mind as you create illustrations to add pop-up tabs is that they should be small enough that when the map is closed, they do not extend past the edge of the map. Watch me do it... The few sut and times that are involved in making your own pop-up card are really very simple. If you're a visual learner watch the video below and I'll walk you through everything you need to know to make your own pop-up card. The video is only a couple of minutes long and I think it will answer any questions you have about using my pop-up template card! I've included the illustrations below as part of a pop-up package of map templates in my free resource library. When you download a template, these illustrations will also be part of that file. Color and cut any three of these illustrations for an easy way to personalize pop-up cards. Can't see just what you're looking for? Make your own small drawings or letters using the illustrations provided as a guide to size! Attaching details... Once your illustrations are painted and cut, it's time to attach them to tabs on pop-up cards. You want to attach them using a glue point or glue stick. Keep in mind that not the entire illustration will enter contact with the pop-up tab. Many illustrations will hang on the edges of the tab. If the glue goes beyond that area just leave the card open until the glue dries so you don't end up with it all glued shut! Adding more details.... Use a thin black marker tip to add any handwriting or signature to the hand-pop-up card. Of course, the look of the card can be added as well. Add an extra layer of white paper to give a clean surface to decorate on the front of the card or draw directly on the colored surface!
