Kids encyclopedia facts

The search engine and online encyclopedia is Kiddle.co focusing on protection for children. Kidal is powered by google programmable search engine and employs SafeSearch with additional filters. The user enters the topics in the search toolbar, and Kidle returns and ranks its findings, and pushes child-protected content more into their search results. In 2014 the History Kidal logo was registered in 2014. .co domain was chosen to emphasize only children's target audience of search engines. [1] Kidal became very popular in social media in 2016, and even became a meme due to blocking a few words for a short time. [2] Format Kidal uses an outer space stylistic theme for its pages. [3] It looks like a Google Programmable search engine window. After entering the user's subject, Kidal presents the search results, the first three results being deemed safe and written exclusively for children and checked by kidle editors, the next four secure sites are not written exclusively for children, but are presented in child-friendly language. The eighth results and beyond are some more secure sites written for adults but harder for kids to understand. The results presented are filtered through Google SafeSearch. [3] [1] If the user enters what is considered bad word then a picture of the robot is displayed, asking the user to try again. [4] Kpdia Kidal Encyclopedia (KPDIA) is an online encyclopedia, available from their search engine, powered by MediaWiki. It lists more than 700,000 articles, and is based on selected content and facts from Wikipedia, rewritten for children. Kidal sees his Kpdia as an educational resource used for school homework help and general education and includes his articles in search results. [5] [6] Criticism In 2016, Kidal was criticized for blocking the phrase gay, lesbian and sex education, claiming that the keywords were not suitable for young children. [7] [8] He also banned transgender and bisexual words. [9] Due to public outcry, Kidal announced that they would unblock these words. [10] Kidal is powered by Google Custom Search, but not affiliated with Google LLC. [11] However, it has been mistaken for a Google product in many news articles and blogs due to its name. Kidal Encyclopedia. A richly decorated version of The Naturalis Historia of Pliny from the 13th century. This was the first time 77-79 advertisements were published. Pliny died in the explosion of Vesuvius. Ad 79 is an encyclopedia or a collection of encyclopedia information (usually a book). Some are called encyclopedia dictionaries. All encyclopedias were printed, until the late 20th century when some CDs-RoMs and on the Internet. The 21st century encyclopedias are mostly online by the Internet. The largest encyclopedia in the English language is English Wikipedia, with more than 6 million articles. The second largest encyclopedia is britannica, which is the largest that is printed. Any kind of encyclopedia can inform us on many different subjects. The book series was used to summarize all the knowledge published over thousands of years. A famous early one was the natural history by Pliny the Elder. The name encyclopedia is from the 16th century and means full knowledge. Denis Diderot's French encyclopedia was the first to have major parts written by many people around the world. After the printing press was invented, dictionaries with long definitions began to be called encyclopedias that were books that contain articles or topics. For example, a dictionary of science, if it included essays or paragraphs, it was thought of as an encyclopedia or knowledgeable book on the subject of science. Some encyclopedias then put essays on multiple topics in alphabetical order rather than grouping them together by topic. The word, encyclopedia, was put into the title of some encyclopedia. Companies such as Britannica were introduced with the aim of publishing encyclopedias for sale to individuals and public use in libraries. Like dictionaries (whose definitions were), these publishers hired hundreds of experts to write articles and read and chose articles. Some internet encyclopedia allowed its payment customers to submit articles from other encyclopedias. Other internet encyclopedias accepted writing from non-paid users of the encyclopedia (users had not signed in). The types of encyclopedia are different types of encyclopedias. Some are common and have pages on a lot of topics. The English language encyclopedia Britannica and the German Brockhaus are the common encyclopedia. Some are about specific topics. For example, there are encyclopedias of medicine or philosophy. Others include the Dictionary of National Biography, the Dictionary of American Naval Fighting Ships and the Black Law Dictionary. There are also encyclopedias that cover many topics with a perspective or a cultural bias. These include the Great Soviet Encyclopedia and The Conjunction. There are some online encyclopedias that are used A lot in schools like Kidal. There are two main ways of organizing the printed encyclopedia: A to Z (alphabetical passage) or by categories. Most encyclopedias go from A to Z. Many dictionaries have the same information as the encyclopedia. Examples of encyclopedia dictionaries compact version of oxford english dictionary.
