Compared to the control condition, the number of positive terminals was higher in the rolipram condition, and this trend was statistically significant for the proximal part (*p* = 0.045). The number of positive vesicles was also increased in the proximal part of the terminals in the rolipram condition, but this trend was not statistically significant (*p* = 0.077). The densities of the docked vesicles per terminal were significantly higher in the proximal part (*p* = 0.002), but not in the middle part (*p* = 0.45). We found a significant negative correlation between the density of the docked vesicles and the number of terminals in the proximal part (*r* = -0.719, *p* = 0.006) and in the middle part (*r* = -0.660, *p* = 0.014) of the terminal. We found a significant negative correlation between the density of the docked vesicles and the number of positive terminals in the proximal part (*r* = -0.633, *p* = 0.019) and in the middle part (*r* = -0.528, *p* = 0.040). Discussion ===== In our study, we found that the presence of rolipram in the perfusion solution significantly increased the density of the docked vesicles and the number of positive terminals in the proximal and middle parts of the terminals in the dorsal striatum. A decrease in the amount of docked vesicles at the active zone of the terminals was previously observed in the somatosensory cortex during motor learning ([@B11]; [B3]), but no detailed study has been performed so far in the dorsal striatum. As the amount of the docked vesicles at the active zone of the terminals was decreased by rolipram, the vesicles 520fdb1ae7
