If you're a child, the age of your parents is a factor in determining your risk of being involved in a property claim. The age of your parents affects your risk of a home loss in two ways: Your risk of being involved in a property claim is lessened if your parents are older. Your risk of having a claim paid by your parent's insurance is reduced. A younger parent is likely to have a bigger claim than an older parent if the child was a driver, played in a sport, was a cyclist, was a participant in an activity on property, or was involved in an accident. Age Also Affects Your Risk Of Being Involved In A Claim When you're younger, your risk of being involved in a claim is higher because you're less experienced. Therefore, the most likely accident scenario that will result in a claim is a car accident, and you're less 520fdb1ae7
