The business account came with the two words in business names I reverse on the checks (so it didn't name my business at all), and Di Kerr replied that it would fix it when it comes time to order new checks - not good. A year later, when he left, another employee got the bank ordered me new checks with the correct name. When I gave my new credit/debit card automatically through the expiration, I received two cards with the exact same number- and my personal card was clothed from my business account, which took the days to figure out. I went to branch into Wilson and they supposedly 'fixed' the problem. However, with two cards in the same number, I was wondering how an online transaction could differentiate between the accounts - the response from the main branch was that it could not and would order my new card as the Wilson branch had broken the expired personal card. I am not without a debit/credit card accessed from my personal account for two weeks while cards are ordered and come. A terrible experience. I switched bank as soon as I have time to deal with the inconvenient.* This review was with this bank for 1 - 3 years* this review had 3 - 5 banks before.1 in 1 person found this review helpful.
