This was predicted as soon as India gained independence from the American, we proved him and dozens of others wrong over 72 years. I pray to the almighty, please please we have been, and we akhand Bharat Economic Times' Gujarati edition announced its closure on Saturday after being in business for almost a decade and a half. The newspaper began its activities in February 2007. Readers were informed of the closure of the newspaper through an advertisement printed in the newspaper. It is with great regret that we would like to inform you that we have decided to stop publishing your favorite newspaper, the Economic Times (Gujarati). From now on, the newspaper will not be withdrawn. We would like to thank all the readers and advertisers who have supported us over the past 14 years, the newspaper writes in Gujarati. An employee told Newslaundry that they were only informed of the closure four days ago. Teh He reportedly received a call from the human resources department and was told that July 31 would be the last day of publication. The staff member added that the sudden decision affected the entire team of 14 employees. Meanwhile, Gujarati was not the only newspaper to be shut down amid the pandemic. Earlier, the Pune-based Sakal Media Group closed its operations for the Sakal Times and Gomantak Times. The Sunday edition of Business Standard, together with Patna and Raipur Hindi, was also discontinued. The Times of India, Hindustan Times, Hindu, Nation News, Indian Express, Outlook, quint, etc. also took action amid the pandemic and fired their employees.
