A 68-year-old man was referred with complaints of cough and dyspnea. Computed tomography (CT) scan of the thorax showed a 7.6 x 6.2 cm mass in the right middle lung field. Biopsy specimen revealed a poorly differentiated tumor that was positive for thyroid transcription factor 1 and negative for cytokeratin and thyroglobulin. The patient underwent complete resection of the tumor. The histological findings were consistent with T3, large cell carcinoma of the lung. The patient subsequently received three courses of paclitaxel plus carboplatin. Seven months after surgery, a follow-up CT scan of the thorax showed recurrence of the disease in the mediastinum and subcarinal region, so a video-assisted thoracic surgery was performed to achieve radical mediastinal lymphadenectomy. Pathology showed extensive necrosis, and no evidence of metastasis. The patient refused chemotherapy, but he died of recurrence 4 months after surgery. A novel lead-free perovskite-based dye-sensitized solar cell. A new perovskite-based dye-sensitized solar cell (DSSC) is reported. Due to its simple preparation process, no post-treatment is required, which is beneficial to the fabrication of large area and cost-effective devices. A high power conversion efficiency of 2.7% was obtained with a concentration of platinum ions of only 10-20 nmol/L without a toxic lead (Pb) additive. This is the highest efficiency for DSSCs using no toxic metal additives yet reported. Show HN: Bugmob – An Open Issue Tracker for Self-Hosted GitHub Repos - pieterhg ===== pieterhg Hey all!
