This section centralizes USCIS citizenship publications and resources available in other languages. Choose one of the languages below to find these resources as you prepare for your U.S. citizenship. Some applicants, because of their age and age as a legal permanent resident, are exempt from the requirements of English for naturalization and may take a civil language test of their choice. For more information, see Register to receive an email update from the Citizenship Resources Resource Center. Before a naturalization interview, be sure to be exhausted for the English language and citizenship test, using our free resources to help you prepare. The English part of the naturalization test has three components: conversation, reading and writing. Your ability to speak English will be determined by a USCIS employee during an N-400 interview, a naturalization application. To read the test, you should read one of the three sentences correctly. For a written test, you must write one of three sentences correctly. During the civilian part of the naturalization test, you will be asked up to 10 questions out of a possible 100. You must correctly answer six out of 10 questions to pass the English citizenship test. If you are 65 years old and you are older and have been a legal permanent resident (LNR) in the United States for 20 years or more, you can only study issues that have been marked by an asterisk. Note: When the naturalization test, some responses may change due to choices or appointments. For answers to these specific questions, please visit the Civics Test Update page. Sign up for an email update from the Citizenship Resources Center. Exceptions and residences Some applicants, due to their age and time, as LNR, are exempt from English requirements for naturalization and may take a civil language test of their choice.
