Skip navigation! This post was originally published on July 17, 2019, when a trip to the office on a daily basis was very normal. Although our lifestyle has changed significantly in 2020, we know that many people are getting around on a bike these days. Since our fashion market writer's bike style tips are still relevant, we've just updated the products discussed below to make sure everything is in stock. Enjoy! Disclaimer! I'm not an experienced biker. I don't know how to change a tire; I never touched the fixie; I just found out about the hand signals and I'm probably still doing them wrong. However, I should probably put my feelings of imposter syndrome aside (said that every woman at some point in her life) because despite these flaws, I ride my bike every day. Mainly because I am convinced that this is the best way to get around. You burn calories without burning fuel, and if you're cycling in the city, you'll probably get to your destination faster than anyone stuck in the subway or sitting in traffic. As the editor of the fashion market here at Team Shopping, I'm here to dispel any notion that you should sacrifice style (if fashion is something you love too) if you want to live that cycling life. I'd like to better reveal here, but the truth is that riding doesn't affect the way I dress very much. There are things I don't wear - heaving silk skirts, heels, polyester nothing - but for the most part, I dress the way I want, and there are a few simple khaki and sworn pieces to optimize my clothes for safety and practicality. This list focuses on fashion and is clearly without gear, but as a wise woman once told me: it's not a bike without a helmet. Don't even doubt the need for this life accessory. I actually feel so bad that I don't wear one in this picture. My current protector is noggin from the Thousand brand, and it's as good as any. Don't complain about the cost, either - $89 is a small price to pay for your life. If you're going to ride a bike in the city, the best type of helmet - and the one I have - is suburban style. They're more stylish and have less aggressive performance off bells and whistles that you really don't need unless you're logging 50 miles a day and/or cruising through rocky terrain - and I suspect if you're involved in these latest bike riding styles, this part may not be for you. (Although, thanks for reading.) If you need more detail about the different types of helmets, the REI has a great primer. Let's not forget that fashion is now a favorite item has its roots in, ame, actual cycling. Plus this skintight short status as the moment is sure to have? There are more options that I can count on. Woohoo! No more cut off the old tights on the knee to wear under the skirts as I cycle the o. (Truly I wear my DIY pair in the photo.) Throw these kids under any skirt or dress, and pro tip: if you wear full volume or line style, you can tie it in a knot, or, even more terrifying for passers-by, tuck the bottom of the skirt into shorts. It may look a little weird, but who cares? No one will notice how you whizz on your wheelie. (Also, one of the couples below is more basketball short than bike short. sorry! I love them so much.) I was going to assume that the cycling habit helped streamline my wallet content in order to tote fewer things, but I actually learned that from being older, wiser, and dealing with the frustration that came along with toting around too many things. Nowadays you can find me carrying only essentials tucked into the smallest crossbodi bag I can get away with. Sometimes when you take ol' for a spin, you purchase things: loaves of bread, buttons down from a $20 rack at your local vintage store, street books, etc. Although I'll probably start the day with just a phone, keys and a credit card wallet secured by a hair tie stuffed into a little-Weenybod crossie, I always leave a little room for a packet tote or backpack. You might think that tight pants are the way to go when cycling, as they stay close to your body and don't get into your car's gear (serious danger). And for some, this may be preferable (spandex is the textile racer of choice for a reason). However, I find tight trousers to be squeezing while riding - especially at this time of year - and I prefer a nice, old-fashioned pair of loose or wide-legged trousers, which I just roll up to my knee when I drive. (And I mean way up to the knee - you don't want your loose goose pants to get into your gears.) Again, I often look crazy, but who cares? This is a terrible scenario that every biker knows well: rain! Precipitation makes the roads slippery and excites all kinds of street juice that will spray your clothes like spin art. I know that holding around a jacket during the summer feels like torture, but your white dress will thank you if you have it comfortable when it starts to drizzly. You would think that cycling is safe only when you are sporting lace-up, closed-toe shoes that will hug your feet and protect them from the elements. And it's definitely a great shoe to wear while riding - you'll find me in vans almost every day. However, I also cycle in sandals, loafers, platforms, and, as you can see in this photo, clogs. My takeaway? You should see that feels safe and comfortable for you; and secondly, make sure your shoes have a tight top or hard buckle. (I.e. avoid slides at all costs.) How do you you You see, I don't reinvent the wheel (zing?) with any of these suggestions - these are just the parts that I gravitate towards ensuring that my ride is comfortable, stylish and safe. If you are an expert biker or a colleague of a freewheeler helmet who sees some holes in this list, let me know in the comments - I'm always looking for suggestions. The last update on October 12, 2020, the success of our day depends largely on the quality of our planning. In order not to miss anything in their affairs, some people prefer to list upcoming tasks in a laptop, while others have long started using digital technology solutions. Calendar apps are some of the main tools that are worth using to organize our lives and plan your time carefully. Many people have switched to specific tools; however, there are still some who don't use calendars on a daily basis. They may find some apps inconvenient to use, non-functional or expensive. In this article we are going to check out the best calendar apps to help you stay organized. Before downloading, as you are no doubt aware, there are all kinds of calendar apps available. Instead of sifting through hundreds of them, we've selected the 10 best calendar apps you can get. In addition to rave reviews from each of them, we've covered the following aspects when creating this list: The user interface - How you move the app should be smooth and simple. The buttons on the app should be clear, obvious and easy to navigate. Synchronization - whether with other calendar apps or other apps, app synchronization should be easy and improve overall experience with the app. Additional Features - Because there are so many options for calendars, many of these apps offer additional features. These features make apps stand out from other apps and provide a unique experience for you. 1. Any.do Calendar This has direct integration with the to-do-Do List Any.Do, giving you a unique tandem of two apps. In addition to advanced functionality, Cal Calendar is easy to use. Creating events is very simple and fast. Moreover, depending on the event name, the app automatically adds contacts and geolocation data to the login description. You can even import your lists and entries from Any.do.Any.do calendar is a great option for any type of user. This is very convenient and does not over-complicate the display mode. Another good thing is that this tool is available for free, so you can use it without spending a dime on the software. Download the Any.do calendar here!2. The Google Calendar Calendar is the official calendar for Android devices that has been tested by many users to the world. If you are now trying to get away from it, consider changing your mind. Since this app is installed on most Android devices by default, many users are users that there is nothing special about this program. They're wrong. Google has been updating its calendar for quite a few years now, and now it comes in Material Design with advanced event features, direct integration into other Google services (such as support reminders and Google Now), and comes with Exchange support. The program is super easy and won't cost a dime for you. That's good, isn't it? Download Google Calendar here.3. CalendarCalendar is a relatively new app. It works as a web app for both iOS and Android devices. It's an intelligent application that recognizes your contacts, schedules, and tasks. It will also help you plan and organize meetings according to your available time intervals. The good thing about the calendar is that it allows you to sync with other calendars you use, such as the Apple Calendar and Google Calendar. So you can manage all the calendars that you have in one place. The calendar also gives you an analytics of your meetings, giving you a clear idea of how you can improve time management. Download Calendar: Meeting and Planning here.4. CalendarBusiness Calendar's business is aimed at people who use their calendar for business purposes and planning. It offers different modes with a wide range of configuration capabilities. The app provides the default view mode by month, and events can be marked in different colors. Display/sorting modes can be adjusted to your needs (month, day, year, or event). You can also set up a multi-day viewing mode to see how things look over the next few days. Scrolling up and down moves you by month, and if you check for a few days, they will be shown in more detail. The daytime display mode offers hourly planning, and schedule mode provides a detailed schedule for a single event. The business calendar is a great tool for planning/planning cases, tasks and events. There is support for repetitive events that can be configured in just a few clicks. By purchasing software, you can use it to import and export other calendars, delete, copy, or move multiple events at the same time. The Android Business Calendar app may seem a bit chaotic, but it works fine and easy to work with if you've been playing with it for a while. The full version of the app is available for $4.99, but you can also find a free version for the test drive app. Download the business calendar here.5. aCalendaraCalendar opens our collection of the 10 best calendar apps available on the market today. With its eye-catching design, easy navigation and great this is one of the most popular calendar apps on our list. Some additional features include color schemes for each case type (48 colors to choose from), different types of demos, different widgets, moon phases, and more. Considering its functionality, aCalendar is a reliable calendar app that has an easy-to-navigate interface with three displays Scroll from side to side allows you to switch between month, week, and day display modes. When you scroll down and up, you move through the calendar at intervals according to your chosen display mode. In addition to the time scheduling feature, aCalendar syncs photos from contact lists or social networks to remind you of birthdays, anniversaries, or any other special dates. The program also supports data transfers through NFC and full-screen widgets, making it easier for you to work with any data. The program is available for free, but you can also get even more features if you buy an advanced version of the software for $4.99.Download aCalendar here.6. The DigiCal Calendar Calendar is very similar to Cal Calendar in that the app focuses more on design than on its functionality. However, this does not mean that the application does not serve a purpose. With this calendar app, you can sync all calendars and view them in different ways. Along with the main features, this program comes with support for Google Calendar, Outlook, and includes some unique and interesting features. You can match keywords with the image or customize a dark theme. The app can even show you the weather forecast for three days. There are many other features that deserve the attention of people who really love to use calendar apps. Download the DigiCal Calendar here.7. SoCalendarSolCalendar can be called a universal application. It claims to be an all-in-one digital solution having basic calendar features combined with some other advanced features such as weather forecast for a particular day. The app supports Google Calendar as well as tasks, widgets, lunar calendar and even Foursquare.Those search calendar apps to cover just everything in its functionality, SoCalendar is a program to consider. There are many interesting things in this app; program does an excellent job working in all-in-one mode. SolCalendar test - the app is available for free. You can check it out without buying the service. Download SolCalendar here.8. IRL Event Social NetworkOne of the most unique apps on this list is the IRL Events Social Network app. As you can guess from the title, the main focus in this social networking app. Unlike other social media platforms, you can assume that this platform functions similarly Meetup.com. This is a site where you can connect with other people in your area who share a similar interest. IRL is that while at the same time providing a convenient calendar for you to plan activities and plan your day. Although because it is a secondary focus, you lack many aspects of synchronization that others have on this list. Even so, because of this huge social function, it's worth considering for those who want to make more connections. Download the IRL IRL event The network is here.9 Today CalendarToday Calendar is one of the most hip and edgy calendars on our list. The decision was one of the first to really adopt the material design and remains one of the few that adhere to a neat style. The calendar app offers bold colors, simple controls and great functionality. It's not as heavy an app as many others; it won't eat the entire memory of your device. If you're not looking for something complicated and overly functional, today's calendar is what you need. You can always test the app before you pay for it - the program is available for free. Download Today's Calendar here.10. TimepageTimepage is an intuitive calendar app that will manage your time in a way that other calendar apps can't. It offers the same features that you would expect from other calendar apps: the ability to record events, notifications and reminders, weather, and driving the duration of a particular event. However, the app goes beyond these features in two ways. The first way is that while the app sends you notifications, it also has reminders for you for what goes on. This little extra time can allow you to prepare and make adjustments to your day if necessary. The second feature - more importantly - is a heat map when you go to see the full view of your calendar. This heat map shows which days you are most busy on, and other days when you are freer. This heat map provides a quick look to determine widely which days are good to add more events and other tasks. Download Timepage here. Our VerdictSearching for the right application to manage different calendars and plan your busy day can sometimes turn into an obstacle course. Most of us need flexible applications that can be easily used to manage our rigid schedule. The app should have all the necessary time planning features and be intuitive. Stylish design and limitless compatibility also matter. It is not always easy to find such a program. The aforementioned digital calendar solutions fall into the cost of use category. They are modern, multifunctional, light and light. Choose the one you like! More performance apps for better time managementPopular photo credit: Unsplash through unsplash.com unsplash.com
