As such, it is a central provider of access to European Union publications, including legal publications (prominently the Official Journal of the European Union), public procurement notices, open data and applications. The Office of Publications makes this content available in a variety of digital and physical formats to facilitate access and reuse of all official information coming from the EU, as well as to ensure its long-term preservation. To that end, it manages a set of websites that provide access to various collection of information (different types of publications). These sites will include: Community Research and Development Information Service (CORDIS), the main source of the European Commission's results in projects funded by the EU Framework for Research and Innovation (FP1 to Horizon 2020). EUR-Lex, the gateway to EU law that ensures free access to and information about the European Union's public legal documents. EU publications, an online library of the European Union containing about 100,000 names of various formats (books, reports, research, reviews, resumes, newsletters, booklets, magazines, leaflets, posters and so on), topics, goals and intended audience. Electronic versions of available publications can be viewed or downloaded for free. Printed copies, when available, can also be ordered through the site, in most cases free of charge, exceptions and conditions, however, apply. Ted (Tenders Electronic Daily), an online version of the addition to the official magazine of the European Union dedicated to European public procurement. It is the official entry point in all business opportunities associated with public procurement contracts above the EU threshold of 144,000 euros in the European Union, the European Economic Area and beyond. EU Whoiswho, the official directory of the European Union administration, with professional contact information of more than 40,000 people, including members of the European Parliament, as well as managers and staff of EU institutions, institutions and bodies. The EU's Vocabularies website, which provides free public access to controlled dictionaries managed by EU institutions, institutions and bodies. The Public Access Office's (OPAc) online public access catalog, which allows librarians or other information professionals to search for more than 330,000 individual bibliographic records and upload metadata of their favorite publications to their own directories.
