The Tom Kuhlmann Flip PowerPoint chart can be used to create flip chart graphics. Use it to change the three flip chart charts or make it part of the course pattern. Author Updated September 28, 2017 Microsoft Word is a useful word processor used by millions of people around the world. It is part of the Microsoft Office Suite and the latest version is available Word 2010. The word has various functions and is considered a professional word processor, which is used by professionals of all industries. It has advanced editing features and you can insert different elements into any document. One of these elements includes flip charts; They can be easily added to Word and you can change them however necessary. Make sure you install Microsoft Office on your computer. This usually includes features such as Word and PowerPoint. The latest version is Microsoft Office 2010; However, you can use any version to create and export flip charts. Traditional flip charts are useful in presentations, and now you can easily create your own flip charts on your computer. Importing charts from Microsoft PowerPoint is one of the quickest ways to add a flip chart to Microsoft Word. You can start by opening PowerPoint and start with a new presentation. You can work on a template or design a presentation from scratch. You can add photos and text, as well as customize animations and display options. When the presentation is complete, you'll be ready to export. Select File, then select Send and then Microsoft Word. This will result in another pop-up with further options that you can customize. This will allow you to export your presentation to Word; It can function as an electronic flip chart. You can still edit this file in Word; you can add additional content or change existing content to suit your needs. You can also add additional Word features to your presentation. Insert the PowerPoint file into Word as an object is another way to do so. Simply click on the location in the document you want to add the object. Click on the top of the toolbox and select the object. This allows you to select the specific PowerPoint file you want to insert. Your file is now built into the Word document, and you can adjust the size to fit your page. Save the original PowerPoint presentation if you need to create another Word document in the future. You can also save a few templates nearby to give you some changes for your next flip chart. Thank you!
