Interplay the process of interpersonal communication (13th ed.)

The main differences between the 13th and 12th editions are the time gap between current and previous publications: 2 years (2014 vs. 2012). The thirteenth edition of The Adler/Rosenfeld/Proctor Interactions is 24 pages thinner. Chapter 2 Culture and Interpersonal Communication: The new section of Co-culture and communication contains the influence of co-cultural factors (such as race, ethnicity, gender, sexual orientation, age, education level and social status) on interpersonal communication. Chapter 4: Describes perceptions of bias (mistakes in perception of others), such as the effect of primacy (excessively high influence of the first impression), the effect of the horn (an unfavorable judgment about the other person on the basis of one negative impression), and a fundamental error of appropriation (or correspondence bias, a tendency to pay great attention to the internal personality characteristics to explain the behavior of others). Chapter 5: A new section of Social Media and Language explores the differences in language use between men and women (personally and online). Chapter 7: A New Discussion on Different Types of Listening Chapter 8: A New Discussion of How Facilitative Emotions Can Improve Relationships. Chapter 9: A New Discussion of Relational Services and Social Support Strategies. Chapter 10: The new Section Link in Romantic Relationships covers the characteristics of romantic relationships and guidelines for successful communication Chapter 11: A new discussion about the inviting communication climate (when people express interest in interaction). 13th Edition of Interplay: Interpersonal Communications Process 12th Edition of Interaction: Interpersonal Communication Process 11th Edition of Interaction: Interpersonal Communication Process about the author: Ronald B. Adler is Professor emeritus of communication at Santa Barbara City College. He is the co-author of Understanding Human Communications, The Twelfth Edition (OUP, 2013). Look, Look into It (2014) and Communication at Work: Principles and Practices for Business and Professions (2013). In addition to his academic activities, Ron works with businesses and nonprofits to improve communication between colleagues as well as with clients and the public. Lawrence B. Rosenfeld is a professor of communication studies at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. His articles appear in journals in communication, education, social work, sports psychology and psychology, and he is the author of books on small group, interpersonal and nonverbal communication. His latest book is When Their World Falls Apart: Helping Families and Children Manage The Aftermath of Natural Disasters (2010). In 2000, Lawrence received the Donald H. Eckroyd Award for Excellence in Higher Education from the National Association for Communications, and in 2006 he received the Gerald M. Phillips Award for Applied research from the same national national Organization. In 2012, he received the William C. Friday Award for Excellence in Teaching at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Russell F. Proctor II is a professor of communication studies at the University of Northern Kentucky. He teaches courses in interpersonal communication, interviews and communication pedagogy and won the NKU Distinguished Professor Award in 1997. Russ also received recognition for his teachings from the National Communications Association, the Central State Communications Association and the Kentucky Communications Association. In addition to his work on Interplay, he is a co-author (with Ronald B. Adler) from Looking Out, Looking In (2014). Review: Interaction is a comprehensive, binding text for an introductory interpersonal communication course. The authors offer many specific examples of concepts and the newest research quotes. Graphics, cartoons and diagrams provide fantastic illustrations of concepts. I finally found a text that students don't complain about! -- Rachel M. Resnick, Elmhurst College This is one of the most written interpersonal communication texts on the market. Always has been and still is. It includes chapters on key topics to be discussed in any class of interpersonal communication, including non-verbal communication, listening, conflict, and defensive and supportive communications. --Lowell Habel, Chapman University Interaction does an excellent job of providing a thorough, entry-level survey of interpersonal communication theory and research, and does so in a very accessible way. It doesn't feel goofy down, but students tend to find it relatively easy and fun to read. Every semester I have students tell me that they keep the text because they loved it so much and see it as a great resource. --Patricia Smith Ollie, Concordia University Scholarship is the newest and freshest I've seen. I like the focus on technology. I like the way heads separate off and important sections are added to the responsibility for changes in society. I think the authors have achieved their goal because they are tailored to the book for today's very busy student. They also added many clips to MEDIA Media and socially significant research. Easy to follow, has excellent links to popular culture, and has fantastic nugget boxes. --Matthew Taylor, Lone Star College Interaction is comprehensive, should use the text for an introductory interpersonal communication course.
