you are playing the singleplayer arcade mode but dont feel like doing it straight through, you do. others would call that boring. not me. what I'm suggesting is that you play a match in high gear, but make it so that you'll lose your lives over and over again, until you get to a point where you can no longer play. This is the goal, not getting through. So you'll have your ever escalating back and forth. the gameplay will be broken down into three parts: 1. high gear, you will use one of your 6 lives to play the match (like above). If you lose all your lives, you quit. If you quit, you go back to the main menu and you can play another round. You can only lose up to 5 lives during each round. 2. 4 lives, you'll still use your 6 lives, but you can only lose 2 lives during each round. 3. 2 lives, you can lose 3 lives during a round. 2 and 4 are what I call the "good" mode. You can win them if you really just keep the ball moving down the line. 2 life mode is a challenge but I don't see why you wouldn't be able to get it. 3 is the "bad" mode. If you start to lose lives in a match, the game will slow way down, you'll notice, and then you will lose all lives. The game will continue to slow down until you are at the point where you can't even see the ball. Then the game will stop. I've found that when you are on 2 and 4, the game can get kind of repetitive and predictable. The best way to break it up is to have your computer mess around with the game. It shouldn't do this too much though, as that will be inconsistent and may make the game harder. You're not cheating, nor have I ever thought of doing this. This will be for the hardcore crowd. If you are not willing to try, then maybe you should find a less challenging game. play the game as a means to win your lives, not to win. you will always lose a few to get to the point where you can't lose lives. let's say you lose 4 lives. now, you go back to the main menu. you can't beat the game if you don't beat yourself. if you can't beat the game, then 520fdb1ae7
