I want that the "div" gets smaller while the arrow is moving. That works, but it should not move up and down. HTML CSS body { height:100%; font-family:Arial; background-color: #fff; } #test { position: relative; padding:0; width:100%; overflow:auto; #test > div { background-color:#FFF; margin:5px; height:100px; width:100px; .scroll { overflow-y:scroll; overflow-x:hidden; position:relative; A: The "div" (green) moves up and down while the arrow changes the scrollbar height. No it doesn't - the browser sets the height of the to be at the height of the tallest content inside. I want that the "div" gets 520fdb1ae7
