Retna It shouldn't surprise anyone that Matthew McConaughey seems to star in every third romantic comedy-he's the perfect date-film draw. Not only does the 39-year-old Texan possess a baked/dimple combination powerful enough to hypnotize theaters full of women, he also has something to offer his dates. What straight man can resist indulging in McConaughey-my-bro fantasies, complete with light beer and hours spent chillin' and grillin' outside the famous Airstream actor, with the option of sor-hours nude conga jam? Nicknamed Redneck Buddha is actually a bud and fellow shirt-eschewer Lance Armstrong, once a romantic Penelope Cruz and Sandra Bullock recently had a hangin' with Brazilian model Camila Alves, who last July gave birth to a son, Levi. This month, McConaughey goes by his two-time rom-com partner Kate Hudson to woo Jennifer Garner in Ghost Girls of the Past. ELLE: Have you ever had any strange misunderstandings about human sexuality as a child? MATTHEW MCCONAUGHEY: Oh yes. From checking Playboy I've always thought -jeezum, we still don't have a better word for it than a vagina, right? - I thought I had public hair and he collided horizontally. You know, east/west, not south. So the first time I got to third base, man, I've been hunting for a long time. ELLE: You could easily have missed a third overall and got into a place so banned it never even got its own base. MM: And I didn't want to go there. I was very scared of hunting around, so it took about an hour to find. ELLE: Congratulations on fatherhood. You were quoted saying that within 14 hours of Camila cuts, you got tribal on it and provided the soundtrack of Brazilian music. Also trying to deejay my wife's labor, I'm curious: At any moment she threatens to shove a boom box down her throat? MM: Oh, they're going to catch up. Camila was the one who wanted music, but she also very quickly said: Skip this song! So here I have been blazing through this playlist until it nods to yay head or not, and I like, this next song is better that groove or I will have to run through the bed and change it. Elle: Your brother Rooster famously named his son Miller Lyth McConaughey. When your son was born, was there any impulse to follow in this family naming tradition? MM: What's it called Jose Cuervo? No. I wouldn't dare try to compete with the Rooster. Now he's got a daughter soon, and I think her name is Marguerite. I'm serious. Barbara Walters seemed to hit you during your 2006 interview, which ended up rubbing her legs. If you were both single, could you let her have her way with you? MM: I would have to tell these cameras to cut their cuts. ELLE: All jokes aside...? MM: Look, I think Anthony Quinn once said, There's something wrong with any heterosexual person under the age of 80 if he can't find a find With every woman. There's a lot of truth to that. ELLE: Any woman you can think of who can't be a cover, but who will you find attractive? MM: Not so specific, but yes. And I see it more with black women who dress up and they wearin' everything to fit snug and they walk. And you're like, man, look at yourself! Where did you do that? She may be a bigger package, but the boy, she sure understands how she is wrapped. IN Your Beef: This is what dinner radio ads are when you say: Isn't it time you took your appetite for a romantic protein getaway?... Only you two lie side by side under the skies of filets - you make that eating meat sounds erotic. Could you do the same to convince your girlfriend to schlep with you at Home Depot to pick up a generator for Airstream? MM: I'm sure so, man. You have to be a kind of general, something like: Mmm, going to go on a drive, check out a set of tools for some heavy machinery, and get back ready for the road trip. And since you're going to be my pilot, I need you to watch what we're going to pick up, because we're going to have a choice. And I know you wanted to get that Airstream out so we could have a good time. It would be nice that you're there to check out the car. ELLE: You fought cows to prepare for your role in the reign of fire. Would you fight a crocodile for the woman you loved? Grizzly? MM: Rather not. But if you can catch eye contact with a mammal, you can buy yourself some time because, like another mammal, you can communicate. You can't trust a reptile. But I was thinking about winning this grizzly fight. ELLE: Say it. MM: I believe that when the grizzly gets to you, it will come up, open its paws, and come at you. You will have to shoot the gap, go straight to your chest, and take your Bowie knife into your intestines and pull up through your chest. If it's a fatal shot, it's a grizzly that's going to fall on you. The real trouble is getting out from under him. ELLE: I'm stunned by the amount of thought you put into it. MM: Oh, I have dreams about this kind of shit. I don't want to fight any of this, but I'm just saying that's what I'll do if a situation arises when I'm just sitting there and I'm going, oh, look there. The grizzly has my girl and baby. Cottman Transmission Systems Inc. in Fort Washington, Pennsylvania, has found a unique way to inspire a franchisee relationship. For the past 10 years, home office staff in Cottman have thrown on the saddle hooked up with with franchise owners and headed for wild blue over there on a motorcycle trip. Part of the outgoing experience that differs each year, the trip covers several thousand miles for a week or more, with activities that included whitewater canoeing and visiting hot mineral bath springs. Participants are usually of the most successful franchises, which Jim Corkran, co-owner and vice president of operations at Cottman, attributes to their risky personalities. The people who join us on these trips are the best performers, he says. We welcome any franchisees, but these highly competitive people like to do things that are stressful and a bit risky. The franchisor and franchisees get more from travel than just easy riding. We're trying to break down some of the typical franchisee barriers and build relationships based on communication and mutual respect, says Corkran. We're doing it because it's amazingly fun, but that's not all. We treat our franchisees as equals. We like to spend time with them. Downloading movies is a simple process that is easy for any solution, but you need to be aware of a number of components before you start. You want to make sure that your computer is ready to download, that you have the right software, and that you are downloading the right kind of movies. Downloading is not the same as streaming. Knowing the difference between downloading and streaming can save a lot of time, and there are important pros and cons for both. One of the most important things to remember when downloading movies is that they can be really great. While it's common to download movies to stay under 5GB, some of the super high definition videos may require 20GB of space or more. For reference, most new hard drives come with 500 to 1000GB of space. Make sure you have plenty of space before you download the movie. One easy way to see which files are hogging all the vault is to use the disk space analyzer. If you can't move existing files from your main hard drive or delete anything to make room, you may end up having to store the movie on another hard drive, like a flash drive or an external hard drive. Since movies are some of the biggest files that you can download, they take much longer to save on your computer than a regular file like a song or image. One way to make sure the whole network doesn't slow down is this is to use a download manager, especially one that supports bandwidth control. Download managers don't just help in classifying and storing downloads downloads are also allowed to be used to limit the bandwidth. Since movies usually take some time to fully download, they tend to suck off bandwidth from other devices on your network at the same time. If when downloading movies other devices on your network slow down, the video buffers, and there is a general sense of delay, set up a download manager to limit downloads so that they can only use a portion of all available bandwidth as much as 10 percent or 20 percent. It's also possible that an Internet connection simply doesn't support a fast download. For example, if you pay a provider for a download speed of 2 MB/s, you can download a 3GB movie in about 25 minutes. If you want to keep a movie the same size for just five minutes, your network should maintain speeds of up to 10MB/s. You can check the internet speed to make sure you actually get what you pay. Movies downloaded through torrent sites have a high risk of adding malware to your computer. Make sure your computer is safe with an antivirus program to catch any threats before they can cause damage, and always do regular scans to check for malware. In addition to anti-malware software, it is important to educate yourself on how to detect a fake torrent or fake website download. Fake movie downloads will attach an unseen file extension format like .EXE or .MSI is at the very end of the file to trick you into opening a program, not a video. Ordinary video files usually end. MP4, .Avi, MKV, or .Mov. Another component to watch out for when downloading movies is file size. If it's too small, like less than 300MB, then the video is probably not real. Most movies are much larger than 300MB and tend to end up falling in the range of 700MB to 5GB. It's a common thing to download a movie and then not know how to open it. Some movies are in file format that no program on your computer knows how to open. Fortunately, you can choose from a number of absolutely free video players who will support the format of the film. One of the most popular free video file players is VLC. You can use it to play shared video file formats such as MP4 and AVI, as well as others such as MKV, MOV, WMV and many others. Stick to this program if you ever don't know how to play the movie you downloaded. Some movie downloads are 100 percent fake and will try to convince you that you have to install their special software in order to see the videos. They may even start showing the beginning of the film and then stop and display about how you don't have the right program installed. Unfortunately, this kind of video is not a real video at all. They are made for the sole purpose of fooling you into thinking that if you buy one or another, or click on a certain link, the movie will suddenly start to play. It's tempting to try to follow the directions and and film, but remember that they are not real; The movie doesn't really exist in this file. Ignore these messages, delete the video, and try to get the movie elsewhere, preferably through a more reputable movie download site.
