If you press a power button pointing to your device, if it's off, it's already programmed and doesn't need further programming. If the device does not respond check the battery in the remote control it may be that the batteries are exhausted. Use the remote mode buttons to set the remote control in the right mode for the hardware. Be sure to program the remote control to work with other equipment, as described in the manual. To change the mode, click for the equipment you want to control. The mode button lights up for three seconds to show that you've installed a remote control in this mode. Depending on how the remote control is configured, the remote control can use UHF radio signals, infrared signals or both to control the receiver. However, only IR signals are used to control other equipment. IR signals travel for short distances, usually 20 feet or 7 meters they can walk up to 40 feet, and cannot pass through walls or other solid Bring the remote control directly to the equipment you want to control, without objects to block the signal path. This guide shows you how to program the remote control for the TV. The next section uses a different method of the remote control program for the work of the TV or other equipment (e.g. DVD player or VCR, tuner, amplifier, audio receiver or second TV). You can program the remote control by following programming instructions using remote hardware code tables, or procedures for scanning hardware codes. When programming a remote control to operate combined equipment, such as a TV/DVD or a TV/VCR, program the remote control in one mode and then repeat the procedure in a different mode. For example, program the remote control for the TV/DVD player using the 765 code, follow the instructions on the TV remote control program using the codes, and then repeat the instructions for the DVD using the same code. Put the remote control into TV mode to use THE functions of the TV, or DVD mode to use the functions of the DVD player (or VCR).
