

Jalen Stewart has been dancing since he was 5 years old. He began his dance training at Savage Dance Company, where he trained in Jazz, Tap, Musical Theatre, Contemporary and Hip Hop. Jalen started competing and attending dance conventions at age 6. He loves hip hop and was honored to be a part of B. Funk Dance Company's Pro Crew! Jalen is also a singer and actor. He was part of Toby Orenstein's "Young Columbian's" since he was 9 years old, singing at different venues in Maryland and DC. Jalen performed in many theatre productions while attending Columbia Center for Theatrical Arts. One big highlight for Jalen was playing the lead, Don Lockwood, in Long Reach High School's production of "Singing in the Rain." Before his performances on the stage, Jalen was featured on Sesame Street, The Good Night Show, PBS Kids Block, commercials and PSA's. He has also trained at studios in NY and LA. Jalen wants to inspire young dancers - his love for the arts and dance has led him to becoming a teacher, and he is excited to be a part of the B. Funk family.
