acclaim she is owed. Not when her country is being outplayed by none other than Germany who, in a two-legged semi-final clash, will face the winners of the Republic of Ireland's tie against England on 10 July. It's true that she has only just arrived in English football and has only been a first-team regular for the past six months. However, she has already proven to be one of the country's most experienced and accomplished coaches, having won a league and cup double and a single cap for her country. So is it time to finally recognise her achievements? It is impossible to not feel a little bit sorry for her but she also knows that she should be grateful and appreciative of what she has achieved.

Acronicta lauralei Acronicta lauralei, the laurale's dagger, is a moth of the family Noctuidae. It is found in the east-central United States and south-eastern Canada, south to the Florida Keys and north to New England. The wingspan is about 33 mm. The moth flies from June to August depending on the location. The larvae feed on a wide variety of plant species including laurel, bayberry and magnolia.
