Bear archery limitless rth compound bow package review

no user reviews - write review from $150 A youth bow able to grow with younger shooters Highly adjustable draw weight 25-50-pounds Highly adjustable draw length 19-29-inches Sold in a Ready to Hunt Package MSRP of only $199.99 The accessories are not top of the line Only available in one finish pattern The bow is only right handed Bear Archery has created some great youth hunting bows, and the Limitless is the latest version of their commitment to getting young archers into the sport as early on as possible. The Limitless model is just that when considering how much adjustment it has overall. The draw weight range is offered in 25-50-pounds, while the draw length is available in 19-29-inches. The axle-to-axle measurement is 28-inches as well, which will be longer for the shorter draw archers, and more compact as they grow into the bow. The 3.7-pound weight is just about a perfect feel for everyone in the draw length range as well. The 50% let-off is also well done for younger shooters. It makes the bow easier to hold, while also allowing younger shooters more control of the draw cycle. The accessories are not top of the line, but they are pretty good for beginning archers. It would be nice for a bow made for younger shooters to be available in a bunch of colors. For $199, the Limitless is hard to beat for a youth bow.FinishWhen younger shooters are getting started it is important for the bow to look like an adult bow, and it can be helpful to have a rig with different color options for shooters to pick from. Unfortunately, the Limitless is only available in God's Country camo on the riser, with blacked out limbs. This pattern looks great, and the black limbs help add a little extra flair as well. however, some shooters would be happy to have a solid colored bow, or maybe even something more geared towards younger girl shooters would be nice. The limb decals are simple, and the Bear badging on the handle matches the rest of the lineup well. Overall, God's Country pattern looks nice, but it would be great to see some other options offered for the little ones to choose from.RiserThe Limitless riser is well designed for shooters across the draw length range of 19-29-inches. The riser, in combination with the limbs and cams create an axle-to-axle measurement of 28-inches. This measurement is pretty great as well. For the shorter shooters, the 28-inches feels a bit longer and more sturdy. For those at the upper end of the draw length range, the axle-to-axle measurement is more compact and maneuverable. The overall rig weighs 3.7-pounds, which may be too heavy for those just starting out depending on the shooter's size. However, those strong enough will benefit from the added weight for stability and increased accuracy. The riser features a rear mounted string stop system, which will cut out noise and vibration, but also helps keep the string away from the shooter's arm after releasing the arrow. There is also a front mounting stabilizer bushing as well. Although the package does not come with a stabilizer, there is an option if there is a want to add one later.GripThe Bear grip used on the Limitless is similar to those on the rest of the Bear lineup. It proudly displays the Bear logo on the side plated grip. It is important to note that although the grip has side plates, they are basically functionless. They do not serve a major role in adding to the feel and shape of the grip overall. With that being said, the grip is an integrated portion of the riser, and has a flat back, and fairly thin width. It fits great in the hand, and should help with repeatability for younger shooters as well. Although some other grips may be more comfortable, this one should promote proper hand placement and shot execution for those just starting out shooting a bow.LimbsIn true Bear fashion, the Limitless gets a split limb design to match the rest of the adult lineup. These limbs are available in one limb configuration, but has a draw weight range of 25-50-pounds. For shooters just starting out, the weight should be low enough to meet their needs. The draw weight can also go well into the effective poundage needed for big game younger shooters may pursue. For that reason, the split limbs with a 25-pound range is pretty great on the Limitless package. The limbs are a fairly standard pocket, which function well for the larger draw weight range, but does not contain a great deal of technology or marketing lingo. The polymer pockets work well at keeping everything locked down and secure, and should last the lifetime of the bow without issue.Eccentric SystemThe cam system on the Limitless is pretty impressive with a 10-inch rotating module adjustment range from 19-29-inches. The dual cam on the Limitless offers a let-off of 50%. When compared to high-end hunting bows, this let-off seems pretty low. however, when considering the archer this bow is designed for, the lower let-off will be easier to manage during the draw force curve. In addition to that, if shooters need to let down for any reason, it will be much easier to do so with a 50% let-off versus a 75-90% let-off.Draw Cycle/ShootabilityThis bow feels and performs very well for a $199 fully rigged bow. The draw force curve is pretty favorable for most shooters with easy to manage transitions. With so much adjustment in the cams, the shooter experience can vary greatly from the 19-inch setting when compared to the 29-inch draw length setting. The 50% let-off is nice as well for having less of a dump into the let-off and the back wall. However, for those pulling 50-pounds, the 25-pound holding weight may be pretty hard to hold for any length of time. After the shot, the arrow is pretty zippy as well. the shot has a little noise and vibration, but nothing terrible. The 28-inch axle-to-axle measurement is easy to aim, and actually holds pretty well or target. To get younger shooters, or even female archers involved for a low entry price, the Limitless is tough to beat.Usage ScenariosThis bow is a great bow for getting beginning archers into the world of archery. The Bear Limitless also has a great deal of growing potential, which means the first bow shooters ever shoot, may also be the first bow they carry into the woods. For a bow shooters learn on, and take to the woods for the first time to be the same rig is pretty special. Bear has created that bow in the 2019 Limitless.Ready to Hunt PackageThe Ready to Hunt package available on the Limitless makes the bow even more appealing. For an MSRP of only $229, young archers get a great shooting bow able to grow with them and all the goodies they need to get started. The accessory package includes a Trophy Ridge 3 pin sight, a Trophy Ridge Whisker Biscuit rest, a Bear 3 Arrow Quiver, a peep sight, and a Nock Loop. Shooter will be able to add a release and arrows, and be all set for getting started in the exciting world of archery. These accessories are not the top of the line accessories, but for shooters just getting started, they will work perfectly. As shooters become more serious, higher end accessories can be purchased to replace any of the included accessories.SummaryThe Limitless may be the perfect bow for transitioning shooters through the phases of becoming an archer. The Limitless allows shooters to begin in the world of archery, and the bow can grow with them a long while before they are interested in a higher end model with a bit more speed. The MSRP of $199 for a fully set up bow may be one of the best deals in all of archery. It would be really nice for this bow to be offered in left handed models as well, but for now, the Limitless is a right hand only production. Getting youngsters involved in the sport is a crucial step in growing archery, and this bow is a great one for getting shooters involved without breaking the bank. It would be nice to have some added color options, and the accessories are not the best money can buy, but ultimately getting shooters into archery at an early age and an affordable price is the goal of the Limitless bow for 2019, and Bear knocked it out of the park. The Bear Limitless is a new bow designed by Bear to be the perfect bow for the young archer who is just getting into the sport.Things to Consider Before BuyingNew hunters need a bow that is able to give them the performance they need to learn how to shoot, without the burden and hassle of too much technology. The Bear limitless provides just what a beginner needs, in an affordable and reliable package. The Limitless has a top speed of 265 fps, which makes it great for young archers who are not used to the power of bigger bows.One thing that every good beginner bow should have is a range of adjustments. The Limitless is able to adjust its draw weight and draw range an impressive amount, which all adds up to make the bow suited for a diverse range of archers. An additional benefit to Bear's adjustability is that if you have a very young child start out with the Limitless, you can adjust it as they grow in size and skill to make it more suited for their improved abilities.The Ready-to-Hunt package that comes with this bow also provides a new hunter with all of the essential equipment they need for successful shooting out of the box.Who Should Buy it?The Bear Limitless is very clearly advertised and designed to be the preferred bow of young, beginner archers. The simplicity and design of the bow alludes to this idea as its size and power are geared towards children with their smaller frames and lack of power. The adjustability and option to have a higher draw weight means that some older children who are just beginning in archery may also be able to benefit from this bow's features.Who Shouldn't Buy it?With its low power and lack of serious hunting features, the Bear Limitless would not be the best bow for anyone other than small children. The low power may seem appealing to the reserved beginner archer, but the compact size and design of this bow makes it difficult for a grown adult or some teenagers to handle. If you are looking to go hunting, this bow also does not have the speed necessary to take down many animals.Pros The RTH package provides young archers with everything they need to start huntingThe Limitless is highly adjustable making it great for a wide range of beginnersThe low power and speeds make the bow more forgiving for young archersConsThe weight of 5 pounds is much heavier than other beginner bowsThe speeds are not fast enough for actual huntingFinal thoughts Despite its lack of power and features, the Bear Limitless provides all the bow and adjustability that a young archer could need.Video ReviewSpecifications for the Bear bow: LIMITLESSBrace Height7 "Axle to Axle Length28 "Draw Length19 " – 29 "Draw Weight25 lbs – 50 lbsIBO Speed265 fpsWeight3.7 lbsLet-Off50%3 quick questions about Bear LIMITLESSIs Bear LIMITLESS bows good for beginners?How much does a Bear LIMITLESS bow cost?What type of bow is a Bear LIMITLESS bow?Bear bows for saleThe Bear LIMITLESS Compound Bow by Starline is a great way to take down big game. Bear Limiter is Starline's latest line of bows, and this one features the famous LIMITLESS twist. It is very nice to have the least amount of effort on the draw and the recoil, but also has a little more flexibility to allow for higher power shots. There are many other varieties of bows out there with a few being really good for wildlife, but the LIMITLESS Compound Bow is the winner in the size department.For those who like a lot of flexibility while still having a good shooting platform, the LIMITLESS Compound Bow by Starline will be great. With the completely adjustable tension spring as well as the universal head design, you can set your own specific tension and not worry about it affecting how the bow works at all. It also has an adjustable blade height, which makes for a different feel to the bow than that of a static semi-hollow design. And since it uses a permanently lubricated system, it is almost maintenance free.It is hard to find a better overall package than the LIMITLESS Compound Bow by Starline. The material used and the design is great, and it can take down some of the biggest game. The adjustable tension, the compression spring, and the universal head all work together to create a new type of shoot that has never been seen before in this day and age. If you want a bow that is versatile and can handle anything from deer to big elk, this is the one to go with. If you do a lot of whitetail or just a couple of deer at a time, this may not be the right choice for you, because it may be too much of a one-trick pony.
