Skype is a great app for video calls. It has a lot of features such as webcam access, and you can zoom in/out for both people. It also has screen sharing, and recording a video. Skype for PC (Windows 7/Vista/XP) does not require the account or number of Skype. It is easy to use and has a lot of features for video calls, and Skype for PC app can work in the background. Windows Media Player, which comes pre-installed in Windows 7 and Vista, can play all video formats. Windows Media Player, which comes pre-installed in Windows 7 and Vista, can play all video formats. Surprised to see your video mixing software is not mentioned, although it is great at mixing audio and video together in one scene. It has a lot of features such as VST plugins for creating and testing VSTs plugins. The problem with a free app is you have no idea if the software is reliable or not. That's why when I download a software I always give it a try first. For a trial run I would download the demo version which has the same features as the full version. Thanks for all of your great suggestions! It's great to have a more complete list. But I still think it's pretty hard to find a mix/match tool that can handle both WAV and MP3 files. I think VirtualDJ, for example, is a bit limited in that respect. Very interesting article. I was thinking about a similar topic recently and just wondered what was the "standard" and the best way to go in the audio mixing and music industry. I still don't really know how all this works and the digital and analogue world, etc. But I guess your article will help me to make up my mind. Thanks for sharing! It is very interesting to me to read about the use of Adobe's Creative Suite in Audio mixing. I am a big fan of Windows and have not used Adobe Creative Suite in many years. In addition, I use a cheap program called Audacity (not to be confused with the free version of Audacity, that requires a monthly fee) to record audio and apply effects. That said, my little old computer (a Compaq Laptop PC, which is now 6 years old) is no match for a multi-core system. When I want to multitask in 520fdb1ae7
