(CHLOR) It was previously reported that the Galaxy S8 and Galaxy Note 8 will no longer be supported for the Android 10 update. Samsung also did not mention the duo in its Android 10/One UI 2.0 roadmap update. Illustration This is also true of the usual reason that Samsung supports updating only to two versions of Android. However, in a recent user feedback letter, a Samsung customer service representative said the duo still qualify for Android 10, i.e. one user interface 2.0. The Galaxy S8 and Galaxy Note 8 are released along with Android 7, which, as usual, Android 9 will be the latest updated version. There is no galaxy in the precedent that supports up to three versions of Android. If raised to Android 10, it's a surprise joy for users of these 2 products. In fact, the Galaxy S8 has only 4GB of RAM and the performance loses a lot compared to today's flagships, which are equipped with up to 12GB of RAM, UFS 3.0 memory, a powerful configuration. Even if Samsung wants to update its operating system to update the lifeline, it should start with recently powerful updated products such as the Galaxy S10, Note 10, Galaxy Fold or the upcoming Galaxy S20. The answer is no, because the Galaxy Note 8 and Galaxy S8 have undergone two major upgrades, so Android 9 Pie is already the latest update. There are no Android 10 updates for the Galaxy Note 8 and Galaxy S8 More specifically, it announced that Samsung will release only two major updates for its high-end devices, which is a maximum of two years. It's like a middle-class device - cheap, it's really a weakness because Samsung doesn't make a difference between these two product lines. Previously, the Galaxy S8/S8 and Galaxy Note 8 were pre-installed with Android 7 Nougat at launch, which were later upgraded to Android 8 Oreo and Android 9 Pie. That time is up to be supported by the software. So you'll need a new phone like the Galaxy S9, Note 9, Galaxy S10 or Galaxy Note 10 to be able to experience Android 10, which comes with the One UI 2.0 interface. Why Samsung does not update Android 10 for the Galaxy Note 8 and Galaxy S8 As mentioned above, the most important reason is that Samsung only supports the software for two years. You also shouldn't expect a new update because the more you lift the device more or less older processor or hardware components will not be able to match the new software. It should be noted that although Samsung changed its mind and decided to release updates of Android 10 Galaxy Note 8 and Galaxy S8, it also inadvertently set a precedent for later. Thus, this is also a major obstacle for Samsung. Comments commenting on Samsung's 2017 super products, including the Galaxy S8 and Note 8 will not be supported by the rise on Android 10. This is sad news for many users, but this smartphone has completed its life cycle well. The Galaxy S8 and Note 8 are not up to Android 10 Samsung has really improved the time of the Android update for its product. At least the company doesn't give up any children. However, the time ed clocked on older products is limited because new smartphones also need to be updated and developed. So it's no surprise that the Galaxy S8 and Note 8 miss the charm with the next version of Android. Most manufacturers, with the exception of Google and Apple, will support updates to their products for two years. This is equivalent to two new versions of Android. The Galaxy S8 and Note 8 really have... Expired. These two models were released in 2017. And both have been upgraded to Android 9 Pie. Samsung, as usual, can forget about these two smartphones. A lot of mixed information has been given about the Samsung upgrade process. Samsung representatives confirmed that its flagships for 2017 will still be on Android 10. It would be a gift that couldn't be more valuable to the user if it came true. But SamMobile said that Samsung will not be able to update this old model. Ultimately Galaxy S8 and Note 8 users still have a pretty good experience on Android 9.0. The first-generation One UI interface is still a modern interface. Smartphones today may not be able to last at the same time, especially as the battery gradually deteriorates and patch updates disappear. Accordingly, the page is divided into sections, according to Model No., each of which has a table showing the latest version of the software and its changelog (monthly security patches). We also discuss the right Note 8 on Android 10 and what are the alternatives. Will the Note 8 get Android 10? The Samsung Galaxy Note 8 is an exceptional device in its own right. Although the device is older than two years old, it is still considered one of the best Note series smartphones ever, and the legacy will remain untainted for a long, long time. Unfortunately, Samsung is not too interested in giving their 2017 devices a taste of the latest Android, so it's safe to say that the Note 10, too, won't be updated until Android 10. → Android 10 Release Date Why Doesn't The Note 8 Get Android 10? The Note 8 came with Android Nougat out of the box and has already received two Android OS updates (Oreo and Pie) since then. Samsung usually limits its flagships to two major Android OS updates, and we don't expect the company to break the pattern with the Note 8. The Galaxy S9 running pie (left) Galaxy S10 running Android 10 (right) Galaxy Note 8 Android 10 ROMs Note 8 may not get the Android 10 update officially, but all hope certainly isn't lost. Geniuses over at XDA Developers have a reputation for supporting outdated devices, and you'd be wise to keep an eye on the Note 8 development flow. Even if the unofficial Android 10 comes out, it probably won't be until the 1st quarter of 2020. So, make sure to manage your expectations. The timing of the Global Note 8 Android 10 software update is not expected on the Galaxy Note 8 as the device is past two guaranteed OS updates (Pie and Oreo), starting with Android Nougat.
