Due to popular demand we have made all electrical formats available in PDF format. To use these forms you will need Acrobat Reader on your computer. Caution If you find this site useful and would like to support it, you can do so simply by clicking the button below and donating what you want. One of the biggest changes to Amendment 1 of the wiring regulations is the replacement of the Periodic Inspection Report with the new Electrical Installation Status Report (EICR). The new model form will serve the same purpose as the old one, but with different reporting options and details: New additions to the Electrical Installation Condition Report: Two columns to record results. Schedules for different types of installation, that is. Single cu, multiple dist tables and sub-main circuits. Schedules include lists of items to be checked, including regulation numbers. Changes to the observation codes that will contribute to better consistency of reporting among inspectors and to a clearer availability of priorities. There will now be 3 codes instead of 4. Code C1- Risk Present (Old PIR Code 1- Requires Urgent Attention) Code C2- Potentially Dangerous (Old PIR Code 2- Requires Improvement) Code C3- Improvement recommended (Old PIR code 3- Requires further investigation) The old PIR code 4 Does not comply with BS 7671:2008 is no longer used. The model forms for the EICR will be included in Appendix 6 to BS7671. You can download the new version that can populate the Electrical Installation Status Report (EICR) from the Downloads section. Blank model forms for certification and reporting, suitable for printing and filling by hand, are available in PDF format for download. Published on 26 March 2020 An Electrical Installation Status Report (EICR) is used by a qualified electrician to document the results of electrical tests to ensure that the electrical installation is safe until the next inspection. The report records detailed information about electrical wear, such as faulty wiring or damaged equipment, which can cause electric shock, fires, and deaths. Once the electrical inspection has been completed, the EICR shall be issued to the owner or supervisor of the building with key findings, including equipment in need of repair or replacement. An EICR also serves as a file for when the next inspection should be carried out.iAuditor, the strongest mobile inspection application can be used as your EICR digital tool. With iAuditor, you can simplify the current reporting process through the common results of the tests in real time. With iAuditor, you can: Complete your on-site inspections using your mobile device. Take photos of damaged electrical equipment. Create reports of electrical installation conditions immediately and send them before you leave the site. What does the periodic check include? When a registered electrician carries out a periodic inspection report, the procedure where applicable, location to location. For example, a periodic check on a commercial property will be very different from a residential residence. For home properties, the process would begin with an initial discussion with the customer, covering the degree tested (such as how many circuits), and any restrictions (such as not checking cables on walls or floors, which would require you to cut plaster, etc.). In general, electricians must carry out standard initial verification tests on everything they can access. For commercial properties, there may be operational limitations that the contractor would have to discuss with customers first, such as closing any servers or telephone lines that would affect a business. Contractors can agree with the customer a sampling rate, which will detail what percentage of sockets they would try to start with, and then if any defects occur with sample size, they can choose to increase sample size (for example, from 25% to 50%) to check for further errors. EICR Report While a full range of tests has been completed for periodic inspection, you will receive an electrical installation status report. This is not a certificate, just a report summarizing the safety of the electrical installation. The report is based only on facts and will highlight anything that violates regulations, as well elements such as faulty wiring and outdated protective devices. Your report may include photos detailing anything of concern. In the report, the electrician will determine the maximum length of years you will have to wait until your next periodic inspection. The maximum time between periodic inspections in the household is 10 years, however, your electrician can declare 7 years, because of the age of wiring, for example. You should also receive a cover letter for the report detailing any recommendations for corrective work. If there is urgent work that needs to be performed, the electrician will thus state in your cover letter and then strongly advise immediate action. Create a secure connection... Loader... Communication support Doesn't sound like you understand how PHP handles The usual scenario is to present the user with an HTML page that contains the form. The action attribute of the opening form label indicates the Web page that will process the submitted form (and confirm to the user that it has done so). The form editing page will contain PHP code to do what you need to do with the content of the form. For example, it typically stores the information in a server database, such as MySQL. It can also send one by one to someone. If you want to provide the user with a downloadable, editable format, you could do this by having PHP create a PDF with the data submitted I can't imagine why you would want to do this, but it's possible. I think it takes 2-3 months to verify your application and further other process will then register as a voter on electoral roll. You should not get the digital copy of your voter ID online. I hope this will help you ..... NOWU. You're talking to a military romance crook. I received an email from the U.S. Army directly answering your question pasted below please continue reading. I believe you are the victim of a Military Romance scam, while the person you are talking to is a foreign national posing as an American soldier claiming to be stationed abroad on a peacekeeping mission. This is the key to the fraud they always claim to be on a peacekeeping mission. Part of their scam says they don't have access to their money that sending them is extremely dangerous. If your friend friend/future spouse/spouse asks you to do the following or has experienced this behavior, it is more likely a scam: It moves to a private messaging site immediately after your meeting on Facebook or SnapChat or Instagram or some dating or social media site. Often times they delete the site you met them immediately after they asked you to move to a more private messaging siteProfesses love to you very quickly and seem to quote poems and song lyrics along with using their own kind of broken language as they profess their love and devotion quickly. They also showed concern for your health and love for your family. He promises marriage just get on the state for the license they asked you to pay for. They ask for money (bank transfers) and Amazon, iTune, Verizon, etc gift cards, for medicine, religious practices, and lets him come home, internet access, full work assignments, help sick friend, get him out of trouble, or whatever sounds suspicious. The army provides all soldier needs including food medical care and transportation for leave. Believe me, I've lived it, they're probably deceiving you. I'm just trying to show you examples that probably deceive you. Below is an email reply I received after I sent research in the U.S. government when I found out I was scammed. I received this wonderful response back with many useful links on how to find and report your crook. And how to learn more about Romance Scams.Right now you can also copy the image you gave and do a google image search and hopefully you will see images of the real person imitating it. This doesn't always work and take some digging. if you find the real real you can direct them to the message and warn them that their image is being used for scamming. Good luck, and I'm sorry this is happening to you. please continue reading the government response I received below is very informative. You've been contacted by an email tracked by the U.S. Army Criminal Investigation Command. Unfortunately, this is a common concern. We assure you that there is never any reason to send money to anyone who claims to be a soldier online. If you've only spoken to this person online, it's possible that he's not a U.S. soldier at all. I was even very open to the location and start date to get host matching interviews (I negotiated the start date in the interview up to both of me My host was happy.) You could ask your recruiter to review your form (there are very cool and could help you a lot as they have a greater experience). Do a search on the possible team. Before interviews, try to find smart questions that you're going to ask about host potential (do a team search to find nice and deep questions to impress your host). Prepare your resume well. It's very likely you're not going to get algorithm/data structure questions like in the first round. It'll just be a friendly conversation if you're lucky. If your potential team is working on something like machine learning, expect them to ask you questions about machine learning, lessons related to machine learning that you have and related experience (projects, internships). Of course you have to study it before the interview. Take as much time as you need if you feel rusty. It takes some time to get ready for the host match (it's less than the technical interview), but it's worth it of course. Simply register at the admission portal and during registration you will have an option to enter based on the course. Just sign up there.
