for windows 7 huawei vodafone k3772 firmware for windows 7 Chinese tech firm Huawei, has launched the K3772 modem that is said to be the first of its kind, aimed to compete with the Samsung Galaxy S4. The K3772 modem is currently available in the UK on Amazon for £119 and comes with unlimited O2 GB data, unlimited calls to the UK and unlimited calls to international landlines. Huawei also states that this is the first of a number of new 3G modems that will be launched across the UK over the course of 2012 and which are designed to combat the increasing number of smartphones being released. A separate K3772 USB stick will also be sold that will allow users to connect to the internet using their Huawei GSM and 3G smartphones over 3G networks and such USB stick will cost £4. But not all 3G modems that have been launched in the UK in recent times have been great. Both Motorola, and Nokia have failed to live up to expectations with their 3G modems, so is Huawei a safe bet when it comes to 3G technology? We take a look at the K3772 modem in our Huawei K3772 modem review. Our review is based on the Huawei K3772 modem that has just been launched in the UK. Huawei's brand new 3G modem that was officially launched in the UK is called the Huawei K3772. The Huawei K3772 is said to be the world's first USB 3G mobile broadband modem and will be launched in the UK by O2. The Huawei K3772 will be available in O2's broadband portfolio for £119 and comes with unlimited data, unlimited O2 calls and unlimited UK calls to landlines. When the Huawei K3772 is connected to the internet, it will only work with devices that support USB 3G technology. Huawei's goal was to make the first 3G modem that would rival the Samsung Galaxy S4. The Huawei K3772 modem supports full GSM/GPRS/EDGE connectivity, so it will work with most Android smartphones, HTC's Sense handsets and Windows 7. Check the Huawei K3772 modem in action in our video below. Huawei K3772 modem Hands-on Huawei K3772 modem that is said to be the world's first USB 3G modem is finally launching in the UK.
